APPENDIX.

P R E F A C E .

In the summer of 1865, the first data for these pages was gathered. Since that time the work has been pursued with whatever of vigor time and circumstances would permit. Here a fact, and there an incident were jotted, until all the available sources of information were sought out, the old men and women wherever possible were visited, and their narratives heard and noted, all the old and most of the recent files of county newspapers were ransacked. Letters were written to many persons, not all of which were answered, and the facts of much of the descriptive part of the history first obtained or former versions of them verified from their replies.

Valuable aid is hereby acknowledged from the works of Sherman Day, I. D. Rupp, Rev. D. H. Focht, J. R. Sypher, Hon. Thomas H. Burrowes, Hon. Samuel P. Bates and several series of articles which appeared in the county papers, one under the nom de plume of Philanthus.

Since September, 1871, holidays and leisure time from the routine of daily duty in the school-room have been given to the preparation of this volume until at the end of eleven months of persistent work, the MS is ready to be placed in the hands of the publishers, and from them the book to be sent forth to be criticised and compared with others of a similar kind. Whether it will receive the dictum of good, bad or indifferent is a question of moment after having finished the most ordinary undertaking; but it becomes one of much greater consequence when years have been given to its accomplishment, hence it is with no little degree of solicitude that the author sends forth this first born of his intellect. Go then, history of my native Perry, and may others have all the pleasure and none of the trials in reading and studying your pages that I have had in composing and writing them.

No one who has never attempted to collect materials for even a short article of by-gone events, can reckon the degree of difficulty that attends a labor of this kind. Often after the most careful research, from title page to finis, of a large volume of old records, you are not able to add a half-dozen lines to your manuscript. Writing local history is an elegant work for leisure, and cannot be hurried beyond that spendid pace.

The following special features will doubtless aid the reader in making up his estimate of the merits of the work :

1st. The general divisions into sections, each of which again subdivided into chapters, is thought to be the best and most logical arrangement that could have been adopted, because it admits of the treatment of the greatest variety of subjects within the compass of the book.

2d. Especial attention is called to the Educational Statistical Statement, from the fact that some of it has been compiled from data which could not be obtained at Harrisburg.

3d. The Official Vote was compiled at great labor owing to the difficulty of obtaining the different years.

It is believed to be a very valuable addition to the work. In the preparation of both the political and war records, Mr. Henry Hopple's scrap-book was found to be a valuable auxiliary.

4th. The Natural History, Flora and Geology should attract attention and induce somebody to push further investigations into their inviting domains.

5th. "The War Record" will preserve the names of those who so signally "made and preserved us a nation," as well as give an account of their doings.

6th. The Alphabetical Appendix embodies many short biographical sketches and incidents which could not have been given in any other part of the work.

Without the hope of large pecuniary reward, but rather trusting that it may be the means of doing good, this little volume is humbly entrusted to the public by the author.

SECTION I.—INTRODUCTION.

CHAPTER I.

INDIANS AND FIRST SETTLERS.

Cumberland county, east of the Kittatinny Mountains, was organized in January, 1750. It was then believed that a people of a common nationality should locate in the same settlement, and with such instruction from the Proprietary their agents sent the Irish, Scotch and English settlers to Cumberland, and the Germans to York county. When organized Cumberland had 807 taxable inhabitants.

The country north of the Blue Hills was valued by the Indians as their best hunting grounds, and when in 1740 and '41 their rights began to be invaded by German and other squatters who had built cabins in Sherman's Valley, and on the Juniata, their complaints caused the Provincial government to order their immediate removal, and to forbid others following their example. After this nothing of a decided character was done to prevent settlements until a seat of justice was established in the North, or Cumberland Valley. Previously there was no county seat nearer than Lancaster, Lancaster county.

Soon after the organization of Cumberland county, in 1750, it was decided that all persons living on lands north of the Kittatinny Mountains should be removed. For this purpose Secretary Richard Peters was sent by the Lieutenant-Governor, James Hamilton, to remove all persons from the country north of the Blue Mountain. These people had been warned and advised to leave in 1748, and now, the 23d of May, 1750, Richard Peters, Matthew Dill, George Groghan, Benjamin Chambers, Conrad Weiser, Thomas Wilson, John Finley and James Galbraith, Esqrs., accompanied by the under-sheriff of Cumberland county, went to the place where Andrew Lycon, George Cahoon, William Galloway and David Hiddleston had settled, where they found five cabins. Taking all the settlers into custody who suffered themselves to be taken, they set fire to the log cabins and proceeded from thence to Sherman's creek, where they found James and Thomas Parker, Owen McKeel, John McClare, Richard Kirkpatrick, James Murray, John Scott, Henry Gass, Simon Girty, and John Kilbaugh, whose cabins were also burned. These men were bound in recognizance of one hundred pounds each to appear and answer for their trespass at the next county court to be held at Shippensburg.

In order to prevent settlements in the future, on the return to their former residences of the persons thus driven out, Andrew Monture was licensed to settle and reside in any place he might judge convenient. He settled on the north side of Sherman's creek, on the Elliott farm, about five miles from George Croghan's, who lived on the present Cumberland side of the Kittatinny, near Sterret's Gap, —Monture's run bears evidence of the location. Frederick Starr, a German, with two or three of his countrymen, made settlements on Big Juniata, about twenty-five miles from the mouth thereof, and about ten miles north from the Blue Hills, at a place much esteemed by the Indians as their best hunting grounds. Starr's settlement was probably on the flat ground not far from the Pennsylvania Railroad bridge across Big Buffalo creek, in Oliver township, and was in all probability too close to an Indian encampment of the Six Nations.

Lycon, Cahoon, Galloway, Hiddleston and White probably built their cabins in Pfoutz's Valley, not far from Millerstown, which was then the site of the other of the only two encampments of Indians within the present limits of Perry county. The Indians either willingly quitted their homes, or were forcibly compelled to leave them after the Albany treaty in 1754. They afterward settled in the country of the Ohio. By the treaty of 1754 all the land extending from the Kittatinny Mountains to the Alleghany Mountains was added to Cumberland county. There are traces of either a long residence at Millerstown, or probably a fierce battle which was fought between the resident Delaware and the immigrating Shawnese.

The location of this conflict was no doubt near the canal bridge, for they were interred in a wide and deep mound west of the house now the residence of Mrs. Oliver, and found by the workmen who dug the canal.

These were the only Indian villages on the Juniata in Perry county, owing to the fact that the river was too much hemmed in by mountains between its mouth and Newport, and the distance to Millerstown was not great enough for two sets of people to live nearer, who depended upon hunting and fishing for a living. The Newport Indians had the celebrated fishery now owned by Robert Mitchell, Esq., while those at Millerstown doubtless fished from North's Island, below the rope ferry, westward. The hunting grounds of the former extended along the Buffalo creek, on the west, and into Buck's Valley on the east of the Juniata. This is said to have been abundant in deer and smaller game.

The Millerstown Indians had the range of Wildcat, Pfoutz's and Raccoon valleys, which furnished rich returns of deer, bear, raccoon, turkey, squirrels, etc. Then the rarest of Juniata shad sported in their greatest abundance in its waters, while every tributary abounded in the speckled trout and salmon.

Fishing was followed as a business by the early settlers until 1840, during spring and fall, and yielded large returns. The public works threw dams across the river, and saw-mills were erected on the tributary streams, thus preventing the return of the fish in the spring of the year to spawn, and destroying them by the sawdust. The making of the Juniata canal marks the era of the downfall of the fisheries. Since then fish-baskets have been erected below the Millerstown dam, but the Legislature has declared it an illicit business, and as such only is it now pursued.

Safe from all harm, except the net, spear and hook, it is hoped the fish will again multiply and fill our waters, as in days of yore.

After the burning of the cabins and binding the settlers in recognizance of £100 each, settlements were made in various parts within the present limits of Perry county. The arm of the Provisional government could remove the settlers and burn their cabins, but it could not prevent their returning. The Indians threatened summary vengeance if the government did not prevent this. Hence, to satisfy all parties and obviate further difficulties, the purchase of a large tract of land from the Indians was strongly recommended by Governor Hamilton. This brought about the Albany treaty, to which allusion has been made previously, in which it was stipulated that for the consideration of £400, John and Richard Penn should have all that tract of land extending from the Kittatinny Mountains east of the Alleghany Mountains. The Indian chiefs and sachems who were not present at the treaty declared the whole transaction a fraud, and even those who were present afterward contended that they did not understand the points of the compass, and if the line were run to include the west branch of the Susquehanna they would never agree. This treaty, according to Smith's Laws, vol. xxi., p. 120, included the land where the Shawnee and Ohio Indians lived, and the hunting grounds of the Delawares, the Nanticokes and the Tuletos.

On the 3d of February, 1755, the Land Office was opened for the sale of lands in Sherman's Valley and on the Juniata river. While the sale of these lands was progressing, General Braddock was moving toward "Braddock's Field," where British pride and contempt for the advice of experienced American officers in Indian warfare paid for the dissatisfaction of the savages a year ago at Albany. This was the longest retreat on record, and well evinced the leadership of Washington, who so masterly conducted the haughty red-coats from the scene of their leader's death.

Owing to the fact that Braddock's defeat left the whole frontier exposed to the ravages of the cruel and merciless savages, very little land was entered at the Land Office from the fall of 1755 to 1761.

All the settlements north of the Kittatinny Mountains were wasted by the savages and the improvements destroyed or deserted, and their inhabitants fled to Cumberland Valley for protection. The settlers of Sherman's Valley, and on the Juniata, suffered in common with all others similarly exposed. In Pfoutz's Valley, we have vague accounts of the torturing of white human beings while the relentless savages held their demoniacal revels around the fagots which slowly consumed their victims. Such a scene is said to have occurred around a hickory tree at St. Michael's church, more than a century ago. It is probable that the same hickory tree which now stands at the corner of the grave-yard was the one.

In Sherman's Valley Indian atrocity reached the highest degree of cruelty. Here the well-known savage vengeance was wreaked upon man, woman and child.

From Robert Robinson's narrative we obtain the following: In the year 1756, a man named Woolcomber, living on the south side of Sherman's creek, not far from Center, declined to leave his home or remove his family, on the ground that it was the Irish who were killing one another; "the peaceable Indians," said he, "will harm no one."

While at dinner one day, a number of Indians came into Woolcomber's house. He invited them to eat, when an Indian answered that they did not come to eat, but for scalps. When Woolcomber's son, who was then about fifteen years of age, heard the Indian's reply, he left the table and walked out of the house through a back door. Looking back when he was out of the house, he saw an Indian strike his tomahawk into his father's head. He then ran across Sherman's creek, which was near to the house, and as he ran his fears were confirmed by the screams of his mother, sisters and brothers. He came to our (Robinson's) fort and gave the alarm, whereupon about forty volunteers went to the scene of the murder and buried the dead. The Indians were never punished. Woolcomber was a Quaker of the non-resistant kind; one who relied upon the promise of the Indian orator who assured William Penn, seventy-four years before, that "the Indians and English will live in love as long as the sun and moon shall endure," and thus sacrificed himself and family to his faith in a savage's promise.

In July, 1756, which we are induced to believe was subsequent to the murder of the Woolcomb-ers, the settlers of Sherman's Valley gathered the women and children into Robinson's Fort, and went out in companies to reap the harvest.

A party of Indians stealthily approached the fort and killed a Miss Miller, daughter of Robert Miller, John Simmeson, Mrs. Wilson, wife of James Wilson, and the widow Gibson, and carried with them as prisoners Hugh Gibson and Betsy Henry.

The reapers, hearing the firing of guns at the fort, returned home as hastily as possible, but they came too late to meet the savages, who had made good their escape.

The following is Hugh Gibson's account of his captivity: "At the time my mother was killed, I was taken prisoner, and suffered much from hunger and abuse. Many times they beat me severely, and once sent me to gather wood to burn myself. I was adopted into an Indian family, and lived as they did, though the living was poor. I was fourteen years of age when I was captured. My Indian father's name was Busqueetam. He was lame in consequence of a wound received from his knife, while skinning a deer; and being unable to walk, he ordered me to drive sticks into the ground, and cover them with bark, to make a lodge for him to live in; but the forks not being securely fastened, they gave away and the bark fell down upon him and hurt him severely, which put him in a great rage, and calling for his scalping-knife, he would have killed me, but my Indian mother took care to convey the knife away and ordered me to conceal myself, which I did until his passion wore off, and we did very well in the future. Some time after this, all the prisoners in the neighborhood were collected to be spectators of the death by torture of a poor, unhappy woman, a fellow-prisoner, who had escaped and been recaptured. They stripped her naked, tied her to a post, and pierced her with red-hot irons, the flesh sticking to the irons at every touch. She screamed in the most pitiful manner, and cried for mercy, but the ruthless barbarians were deaf to her agonizing shrieks and prayers, and continued their horrid cruelty until death came to her relief.

“At last a favorable opportunity offered to gain my liberty. Busquetam lost a horse and sent me to hunt him. After hunting some time, I came home and told him I had discovered his tracks at some considerable distance, and that I thought I would find him; that I would take my gun and provisions, and would hunt for three or four days, and if I could kill a deer or a bear, I would pack home the meat on the horse.” Thus lulled, the suspicions of Gibson’s real design were not aroused until he had ample time to effect his escape.

During the year following the murders by the Indians which have just been related, so many urgent petitions were sent to Governor Morris that he sent a message to the Assembly, stating that the people to the west of the Susquehanna, distressed by the frequent incursions of the enemy, and weakened by their great losses, are moving into the interior parts of the province, and I am fearful that the whole country will be evacuated, if timely and vigorous measures are not taken to prevent it.

The Assembly were at first disposed to regard this statement as the mere fancy of an excited mind, but the news of the horrible savage slaughter coming from so many quarters, they were induced to pass a bill for raising forty thousand pounds, but carefully incorporated into it a clause taxing the proprietary estates. For the reason that the bill contained the odious clause relating to the proprietary, it was vetoed by the Governor.

The proprietary presented the Governor five thousand pounds about this time, which were immediately applied to the frontier defense of the colony.

Governor Morris and the Assembly disagreed as to the urgency of protecting the defenseless frontier settlements from the ravages of the French and Indians combined. The matter, with the petitions of citizens of Cumberland county, was referred to the King of Great Britain. The petitioners were heard in London, before a committee of the Privy Council, Mr. Paris acting as their agent, with Messrs. Yorke and Forrester as his counsel, and Messrs. Sharp, Henly and Pratt representing the Assembly.

The committee denounced the conduct of the Assembly in relation to the public defense since the year 1742, and characterized their militia bill as a flimsy pretext to exempt persons from military service, rather than to promote and encourage them to take up arms in defense of their homes.

After considering the report of the special committee, the Privy Council were of opinion that the Legislature of Pennsylvania, as of every other country, was bound to support such government and its subjects; that the measures heretofore adopted by the Assembly for that purpose were improper, inadequate and ineffectual; and that there was no cause to hope for other measures, whilst the majority of the Assembly consisted of persons whose avowed principles were against military service; who, though not a sixth part of the inhabitants of the province, were admitted to hold offices of trust and profit, and to sit in the Assembly without their allegiance being secured by the sanction of an oath.

In February, of 1756, a party of Indians from Shamokin came to the Juniata to Hugh Mitcheltree's, who lived near the river. He had gone to Carlisle on business, and got Edward Nicholas to stay at his house until he should return. The Indians killed Mrs. Mitcheltree and young Nicholas before they left.

From Micheltree's this same party of Indians proceeded up the river to where the Lukens now live. Mrs. William Wilcox and her son had crossed the river shortly before, and while she was staying for a visit at old Edward Nicholas' house, they made their appearance, killed old Mr. Nicholas and his wife, and took Joseph, Thomas and Catharine Nicholas, John Wilcox, (the son who accompanied his mother over the river), James Armstrong's wife and two children, prisoners. While committing these depredations in Juniata county, an Indian named Cotties wished to be captain of this party, but they did not choose him; whereupon he and a boy went to Sherman's creek, and killed William Sheridan and his family, thirteen in number. They then went down the creek to where three old persons lived, two men and a woman, named French, whom they killed. Cotties often boasted afterward that he and the boy took more scalps than all the others of the party.

These murders were caused by the French, who offered large rewards for the scalps of the English which should be brought in by the Indians.

In the autumn of 1756, James Bell and his brother agreed to go into Sherman's Valley to hunt for deer, and were to meet at Sterret's Gap, on the Kittatinny Mountains. By some means or other, they did not meet, and Samuel slept that night in a cabin belonging to Mr. Patton, on Sherman's creek. The next morning he had not traveled far before he spied three Indians, who saw him at the same time. They all fired at each other; he wounded one of the Indians, but received no damage, except that his clothes were pierced with balls. Several shots were fired from both sides, each sheltered by the covert of trees. He now stuck his tomahawk into the tree behind which he stood, so that should they approach he might be prepared. The tree was grazed with the Indian's balls, and he had thought seriously of making his escape by flight, but hesitated, fearing his ability to outrun them. After some time the Indians took the wounded one and put him over the fence, one taking one course and the other another, intending to make a circuit so that Bell could no longer secure himself by the tree. But in trying to reach these advantageous positions they had to expose themselves, when he had the good fortune to shoot one of them dead. The other ran and took the dead Indian on his back, one leg over each shoulder. By this time, Bell's gun was re-loaded; he then ran after the Indian until he came within forty yards of him, when he shot through the dead Indian and lodged a ball in the living one, who dropped the dead man and ran off. On his return home from the deer hunt, Bell coming past the fence where the wounded Indian lay, he dispatched him, but did not know that he had killed the third Indian until his bones were found years afterward.

In July 1756, a small party of Indians attacked the plantations of Robert Baskins, who lived near the present railroad station of the Pennsylvania Central, at the mouth of Juniata river. They murdered Baskins, burnt his house, and carried his wife and children away with them as prisoners. Another party belonging to the same band made Hugh Carrol and his family prisoners.

At another time, the Indians murdered a family of seven persons on Sherman's creek, and then passed over the Kittatinny at Sterret's Gap, wounded a man, killed a horse, and captured Mrs. Boyle, her two sons and a daughter living on Conadoguinnet creek.

The following is from Robert Robinson's narrative: "From 1761 to 1763 there was comparative quiet and security from the incursions of the Indians."

The number of settlers increased rapidly, and much land was secured by location right.

In June, 1763, the plan was matured for a concert of action among all the Indians upon every British post, but it was the 5th of July, and Sabbath day, when they came to the house of William White on the Juniata. It was harvest time, and the reapers were resting on the floor, when the Indians crept up close to the door and shot them while in that position. They killed William White and all his family that were there, excepting one boy, who, when he heard the guns leaped out of the window and made his escape. The reapers all escaped through the back door excepting William Riddle. Some swam the river; others escaped in different directions. Riddle, hardly conscious of what he was doing, walked toward the front door, where a savage met him and fired his gun, but the ball grazing him he was fortunately enabled afterward to escape by flight. This marauding party consisted of ten or twelve of the Shawnee tribe.

The same band of Indians stealthily approached the house of Robert Campbell and fired at the persons in the house. James Campbell was wounded in the wrist and taken prisoner, but there is no authentic account of any person being killed. Immediately after the Indians had discharged their rifles, one of them sprang into the house, and with uplifted tomahawk rushed upon a bed on which George Dodds was resting, but fortunately his rifle was within reach, which he grasped and fired at random, wounding him in the groin. The Indians retreated and Dodds went up-stairs and escaped hastily through an opening in the roof. He went immediately to Sherman's Valley and spread the alarm. He came to William Dickson's, who sent a young man to inform the Elliots, who were then at Edward Elliot's farm harvesting.

This same marauding party of Indians proceeded up Tuscarora Valley until they came to the house of William Anderson. The old man was seated at the table with the open Bible on his lap, conducting the evening worship, while his son and an adopted daughter were around him. They shot the old man, and tomahawked and scalped his son and adopted daughter. Two brothers named Christy, and a man named Graham, who lived near Mr. Anderson, hearing the firing of guns at his place, fled and reached Sherman's Valley about midnight. Their report spread new terror and alarm among the settlers. In order to save Collins' and James Scott's families, who lived farther up the valley and had returned to reap their harvests, twelve men volunteered to go over into the upper end of Tuscarora Valley.

They went by Bingham's Gap, the outlet of Liberty Valley, and reached the valley early on Monday morning. When they came to Collins' they saw by a broken wheel and their bark spoons where they had breakfasted on water gruel, that the Indians had been there, and that there, were thirteen of them. They tracked the savages down to Jas. Scott's, where they had killed some fowls. Continuing on, they came to Graham's; there the house was on fire and burned down to the joists. Here the men were divided into two parties, of which William Robinson was the captain of one, and Robert Robinson, the narrator, led the other. These parties made a circuit, but found that the Indians had just left. They were joined here by the party of eleven or twelve Indians, who came up the valley. Before leaving Graham's the Indians killed four hogs, dined heartily and at leisure, being satisfied that there were none of the settlers west of the Tuscarora Mountains who would pursue them. From this place the Indians crossed over the Tuscarora into Perry county. The pursuers took the path by way of Run Gap, north of Ickesburg. The two paths met at Nickolson's farm where the Indians arrived first, and being apprised of their pursuers approaching, they lay in ambush for them. They had the first fire, and being twenty-five in number and only twelve white men in pursuit, they killed five and wounded Robert Robinson. The particulars of this engagement are given by Robert Robinson, whom we have just mentioned as one of the participators, as follows:

"William Robinson was shot in the abdomen with buckshot. John Elliot, a boy of seventeen, fired his gun and then ran, loading as best he could by pouring powder into it at random and pushing a ball into it with his finger, while he was pursued by an Indian with uplifted tomahawk, and when he was within a short distance of him Elliot suddenly turned around and shot the Indian in the breast, who gave a cry of pain, and turning fled. Elliot had gone but a short distance when he came to William Robinson, who was weltering in his own blood upon the ground, and evidently in the agonies of death. He begged Elliot to carry him off so that the Indians would not find and scalp him; but Elliot being a mere boy found it utterly impossible to do so, much less lift him from the ground. Finding the willing efforts of his young friend fruitless to save him from the savages, Robinson said, 'Take my gun, and if ever in war or peace you have an opportunity to shoot an Indian with it, do so for my sake.'"

Thomas Robinson stood behind a tree firing and loading as rapidly as possible, until the last white man had fled. He had just fired his third shot when his position was revealed to the Indians. In his hurried attempt to load again, he exposed his right arm, which received the balls from the guns of three Indians who fired at the same time. He then fled up a hill with his gun grasped in his left hand, until he came to a large log which he attempted to leap over by placing his left hand on it; but just as he was stooping to make the leap a bullet passed through his side. He fell across the log. The Indians coming up beat him on the head with the butts of their guns until he was mutilated in the most horrible manner possible. John Graham and David Miller were found dead near each other, not far from the place of attack. Graham's head was resting upon his hands, while the blood streamed through his fingers. Charles Elliot and Edward McConnel succeeded in escaping from the Indians and reached Buffalo creek, but they were so closely pursued that when they had crossed the creek and were scrambling up the bank they were shot and fell back into the water where their dead bodies were found.

This little band of twelve, whose Spartan bravery is scarcely equaled in all the history of Indian and border warfare, consisted of three brothers Robinson, William, Robert and Thomas; two brothers Elliot, John and Charles; two brothers Christy, William and James; John Graham, David Miller, Edward McConnel, William McAllister and John Nickolson.

After this engagement, the Indians proceeded very leisurely to Alexander Logan's, feeling their security, no doubt, on account of the inhabitants having fled to the lower part of Sherman's Valley.

A party of forty men, well armed and disciplined, started for Tuscarora Valley to bury the dead; but when they came to Buffalo creek, and saw them, having previously heard the reports of the settlers, which doubtless increased the number of the Indians, the captain thought it prudent to return. In the meantime the six men who escaped in the engagement at Nickolson's went to Carlisle, and reported what they saw and experienced, whereupon a party of fifty volunteered to go in quest of the savages. They were commanded by High Sheriff Dunning and William Lyon. From the best information that could be had of the Indians, it was judged that they would visit Logan's to plunder and kill the cattle. The men were ambushed and in readiness when the Indians appeared, but owing to the eagerness in commencing the attack by some of the party, but four or five Indians were either killed or mortally wounded, until they made their escape into the thick woods, whither pursuit was deemed too perilous. Previous to this engagement, Alexander Logan and his son John, Charles Coyle, William Hamilton and Bartholomew Davis, hearing of the advance of Sheriff Dunning's party, followed the Indians to George McCord's, where they found and attacked them in the barn, but the attack was such a precipitate affair that none of the savages were either killed or wounded, while the entire attacking party, excepting Bartholomew Davis, paid the penalty with their lives. Davis escaped and joined Sheriff Dunning's party, and was engaged with them at Logan's. In the engagement at Logan's there was but one white man wounded. The soldiers brought with them what cattle they could collect, but great numbers were killed, and many of the horses were taken away by the Indians.

The Indians set fire to the houses and barns, destroyed the growing corn, and burnt the grain in the shock, and the hay in the stacks, so that the whole valley seemed to be one general blaze of conflagration as far as they went. The distress of the settlers of Sherman's and Tuscarora valleys can better be imagined than described. They were reduced from a plentiful and independent people to real objects of charity and commiseration within the short space of one week. Carlisle was the only barrier between the frontier settlers and the merciless savages, and it so crowded that every stable and shelter in the town was filled to its utmost capacity, and on either side of the Susquehanna the woods were the only shelter of many other refugee families, who had fled thither with their cattle, and whatever of their effects could be hastily collected and carried with them.

On the 25th of July, there were in Shippensburg 1,384 refugees from the settlements north of the Kittatinny, who were obliged to sleep in barns, sheds and temporary shelters.

To relieve these sufferers, the Episcopal, Christ's and St. Peter's churches, of Philadelphia, collected an amount of money equal to $2,942.89 in the currency of the present time, which was expended in supplying flour, rice and medicine for the immediate relief of the sufferers. To enable those who chose to return to their homes, two chests of arms, half a barrel of powder, four hundred pounds of swan shot, and one thousand flints, were purchased. These were to be sold at greatly reduced prices to such persons as would use them for their own defense.

Induced by an offer which placed protection in their own hands, the settlers returned to their former homes, where they lived in constant dread of the wily foe until Bouquet occupied Fort Duquesne, on the 24th of November, 1764. At this time the French and their savage allies were compelled to sue for the peace, which placed the frontier settlers of Perry and Juniata counties in conscious security from Indians ever afterward.

Rev. David Brainerd, in speaking of the Shawanese who lived on Duncan's Island, stigmatizes them as "drunken, vicious and profane." They journeyed from the south, say their traditions, and had no doubt inherited the vices of the various tribes with whom they contended in their wanderings northward, and hence, were ever ready to carry out the murderous designs of the French.

We have just learned what a scourge these Indians were to the frontier settlers of our own and neighboring counties, but we have scarce given in these pages a tithe of the suffering they caused, for they prowled about, night and day, seeking the unsuspecting moment to strike a fatal blow.

The record made by the sons of Perry during the Revolutionary struggle will be found in chronological order, under "The War Record." It is worthy of a people who had so recently passed the trials of which these pages bear a record.

Settlers occupied the lands from time to time in Pfoutz's Valley, along the Juniata, and in Sherman's Valley.

The first land located by order from the Land Office, in Pfoutz's Valley, was by John Pfoutz, in 1755. He was the first considerable land owner, by any right, hence had the honor of giving his name to the valley. This valley was principally a German settlement. The Germans either entered the lands themselves, at the Land Office, or bought them second-hand from the pioneer Scotch-Irish who moved farther west.

Pfoutz's Valley is still characteristically a German settlement, though there are many persons unable to converse in any but the English language. For our fertile soil the German is slowly exchanging his language ; his children receive an English education, in the free schools, without dissent. In fact, many of our best scholars were the children of German parents.

Pfoutz's Valley has a Lutheran, a Reformed and a Methodist church, with public worship frequently held in the school-houses.

Although the soil of Perry county was first settled by English-speaking people, the farming population is now largely composed of German origin.

The first settlement of Wildcat Valley, known as the settlements of the Juniata, were on the place now owned by James Patterson, by Joshua North, Esq., who owned a tannery where the stone farm-house now stands. Martin Derr settled the property on which Capt. Joseph Ulsh now resides. The Jacob Leas property was located and improved by William North. John Shuman first improved, though David Miller was the patentee of the land, the Shuman property. He built the mill which is still known as "Shuman's mill." Conrad Steiger first settled and improved the property now owned by Henry Martin. Davy Crockett settled the farm recently owned by John Marshall. Daniel Baker made the improvement rights on the farms owned by Henry Nipple and Benjamin Long. John Sweezy settled the David Sarver farm. John Betz settled the property owned by Reuben Grubb.

Old Mr. Ellmaker of the third generation, back from Enos and Reuben, who emigrated to Iowa when young men, and have since removed to the Willamette Valley, Oregon, was the pioneer settler of the properties now owned by David Buchanan, John Grubb and Wesley M. Cauffman. Charles Wright, Sen., cleared the farm out of the woods which is now owned by George Wright. The places mentioned were the oldest settled portions of the valley, and do not date back further than the close of the Revolutionary War, when many emigrants from the eastern portion of the State removed west of the Blue Mountains. There are three churches in the valley, Christ's Lutheran, in Liverpool township, built in 1844; Liberty Hall church, and Wright's church, in Greenwood twp.

Lewis's Forge was east of Millerstown, on Cocalamus creek, in Pfoutz's Valley, and from all we can learn was operated as early as 1800. The old forge hammer, broken through the eye, still remains in the dried-up race, while the stone abutment breastwork of the dam, on the east side of the creek, may still be seen. During our boyhood days the cabins were occupied by negroes.

The "old forge" with the legend variously told (the following is the substance of the various versions) of the Devil's Hole, about a mile distant, gave our daily cow-hunts an interest, and oftentimes a dread that will not soon be forgotten.

The legend of Forge Hill has sufficient local interest to claim the following recital : Before Lewis's forge was in operation, it is related that the devil contracted with three men to prepare him an underground dwelling, and secure him a black sheep, without a white spot on it, until he should come to examine them. A specified time was agreed upon for the completion of this subterranean abode, for which, and the sheep, the builders were to receive a half-bushel of silver dollars. The work was completed, the sheep secured, and the laborers awaited the coming of his satanic majesty. Precisely at the appointed time the devil appeared in the air, showing his cloven foot, to the no little discomfit of the builders, as he alighted at the open door of his intended abode. He proceeded to an examination of the building which was constructed underground of logs, and covered with earth, so that it might appear at the surface nothing more than an elevation of the summit of a hill, requiring a sesame to open it. The abode was pronounced satisfactory ; when the sheep was produced with the greatest confidence that it was black enough to satisfy the requirements. Imagine their utter astonishment when the devil no sooner saw the sheep than he demanded one of them, declaring that it was not without a white spot, as agreed upon, and in order to convince the contractors that such was the case he lifted it from its feet and turned it upon its back, when, lo, the white spot was there. This so alarmed one of the men, who was a Dutchman, that he began to cry out : " Heilig Yasu ! Heilig Yasu ! " whereupon his insulted devilship departed, taking with him the half bushel of money, leaving the chagrined builders in a bewildered condition, one of whom it is said remained insane during the rest of his life.

This is briefly the legend which has been handed down from parents to children, and firmly believed. It probably had no better foundation in fact than that this so-called Devil's Hole was a robbers' cave.

As a sequel to the Indian history of this chapter, we present the following sketch :

Simon Girty (spelled Girtree in the old records) was born and raised in the Cumberland Valley, Pennsylvania. His parents were Swiss Germans, and were much addicted to the use of strong drink and gambling, both of which became characteristics of Simon. It was, doubtless, owing to the fact that Simon Girty's parents taught him by example these bad habits, and left him no legacy but one of dishonor, that he forsook the settlements to serve with young Simon Kenton on the frontiers. He joined the Virginia militia, and seemed anxious to distinguish himself as a soldier. He was disappointed in being promoted, and instead, through the influence of his colonel, publicly disgraced. He fled from the settlements and took up his abode along with a number of others on Sherman's creek, but here he was again followed by the whites, who burnt his cabin in 1750, and turned him loose to roam the wilds as an outcast under the bans of the law. He took up his abode with the Wyandotte Indians, with whom he lived a foe to the whites, more cruel and relentless than his adopted people. He made frequent incursions from the Wyandotte settlement to the Susquehanna. He is said to have slept during his stay at Halffall Hills in a cave next the river in the end of the mountain. He came here for the purpose of watching the whites at Fort Halifax from the top of this mountain. The narrow channel in the river at the end of Halffall Hills was named Girty's Notch. The traveler is reminded of his approach to the notch as he descends the river by the sign "Girty's Notch Hotel."

The subsequent career of this notorious man is rather uncertain. It is probable that he was killed by Col. Clayton, in Kentucky. It is related that Girty stole Clayton's wife from his home while the latter was with Forbes and Bouquet in the expedition against Fort Duquesne in 1757 and '58. Clayton returned home after the war to find that his wife had been stolen by an Indian, which he divined to be Girty, whereupon he pursued the renegade with a savage thirst for revenge, and finally met the despoiler of his household on "the dark and bloody soil of Kentucky," where, in a desperate contest, Girty was slain.

Raccoon Valley, Rye township, Cumberland county, was settled by the Blacks, Nobles and Robinsons, in the order named, from the Juniata.

In this selection certain distinctions gave precedence of location.

Their pastor, Rev. Wm. B. Linn, having the preference, chose his portion near Robinson's

Fort; the father of the Irvin families, in Saville township, chose their old mansion property; he was joined by Elliot's on the west, and he in turn by a younger man, until we reach the Robinson, Noble and Black farms in Raccoon Valley, extending to the Juniata river. This chain of settlements extended more than twenty miles, and included some of the best and most highly respected citizens of the county. It is historic for its arrangement of families in chronological order, as well as the noble record made during every war in which its own or the general welfare was endangered.

CHAPTER II.

FORMATION OF PERRY COUNTY.

Cumberland county was formed out of Lancaster county in 1750, four years previous to the Albany purchase, by which was added to the commonwealth all the lands west of the Kittatinny and east of the Alleghany Mountains.

The earliest division of the territory now included in Perry county into townships was into Greenwood, which included the land between the Juniata and Susquehanna rivers. This township doubtless included at one time a vast area in Mifflin, Snyder and Union counties, being the mother of Liverpool, Buffalo, Howe and Watts, as now defined in Perry county.

Rye township extended from the Kittatinny Mountains to the Tuscarora Hills, including its present territory, Penn, Wheatfield, Miller, Carroll, Center, Juniata, Oliver and Tuscarora townships. The line dividing Rye and Tyrone townships extended direct from the Blue Mountains, passing about two miles west of Bloomfield to the Tuscarora Hills.

Next to Rye, west of the Juniata, was Tyrone, known as "the everlasting State of Tyrone." It included parts of Carroll and Center, all of Spring, Tyrone and Saville. Tyrone was separated from

NEWPORT.

Toboyne by a straight line from the Blue Mountains through Center, in Madison township, to the Conecocheaque Hills.

Toboyne township was farthest west in the county, and included within itself Jackson and Madison townships. This township dates its formation prior to the Revolution.

This was the earliest division of the territory of Perry county into townships. When it was formed into a new county there were seven townships. Of the new townships, Juniata included that part of Rye north and west of the Mahonoy Hills, Saville, that part of Tyrone west of the Lime-stone Ridge, and Buffalo, that part of Greenwood south of the Buffalo Hills.

• Villages were formed at Duncannon, Landisburg, Millerstown, Liverpool and New Buffalo, before or about 1800. These were the earliest towns of the county.

Millerstown was laid out by David Miller as early as 1780, and for a long time seemed destined to become the largest town in the county. It was written for a long time Miller's Town. Fewer unemployed men have lived in Millerstown, in proportion to the population, than any town in the county. Millerstown contains seven stores, a foundry, a large tannery, two churches—Presbyterian and Methodist—and a Normal school. In healthfulness of location, convenience of access, and the natural beauty of surroundings, it is unsurpassed anywhere along the Juniata.

Liverpool was laid out by John Huggins in 1808, and soon became the most important trading point in the eastern portion of the county. Liverpool merchants dealt largely in liquors, grain, plaster, dry goods and groceries. The society was made up of almost every hue, from the smooth and cautious to a sprinkling of roughs, who would extort the laugh of commendation and social entertainment from the most grave and sedate.

Landisburg was originally laid out by John Landis, previous to 1800, who disposed of some portions of the town by lottery, reserving the annual ground rent. It is said "the quit-rents of Landisburg have had as many owners as Joseph's coat had colors."

The courts were held here until the location of the county-seat at Bloomfield, and the completion of the public buildings there in 1827.

The first Court of Common Pleas in Perry county was held in Landisburg on the 4th of December, 1820. Hon. John Reed, formerly of Westmoreland county, was President Judge, and William Anderson and Jeremiah Madden, Esqrs., Associate Judges. Daniel Stambaugh was the High Sheriff.

The following persons were the first grand jurors: William English, Henry Beslin, William Brown, Jacob Weibley and Joshua Jones, Juniata township; Andrew Lynn, Peter Moses, Philip Fusselman, Christian Simons, Henry Hipple, Thomas Kennedy and John Eaton, Tyrone township; Conrad Rice, John Milligan, Thomas Milligan, Moses Oatley, Jacob Burd and Jacob Kiser, Saville township; William Albigost, Greenwood township; William Porter, Buffalo township; Samuel Willis, Rye township; Nickolas Burd, John Kogan and Daniel Matzer, Toboyne township.

The list of constables, at this time, were George Fetterman, Buffalo township; John O'Brian, Greenwood; Thomas Martin, Juniata; Daniel McAllister, Rye; Mathias Moyer, Saville; John Cree, Tyrone; Abraham Kistler, Tyrone; James McKim, Toboyne.

Robert Mitchell, Thomas Adams and Jacob Huggins were the first County Commissioners.

William B. Mitchell was the first Prothonotary.

The old court-house in Landisburg stood until 1841. It was a log building, erecting for a church, when it was taken and finished for a court-house, and in it Robert Gibson, Esq., still dispenses justice with more ability than is usually exhibited in that office.

Landisburg is the starting point of Rice's stage lines, which carry news to and from Newport from all points on the route.

Duncannon, Petersburg, until 1865, was first settled by a Mr. Miller, who took up ten acres, in which it was included. His house was situated on the point between the Susquehanna river and Little Juniata creek.

The oldest store in the town was kept by a Mr. Vanfossen, then there were only four houses in the place.

The settlers that took up land and came to Petersburg after Mr. Miller were Myers, Young, Fessler, Baty and the widow Armstrong. Philip Sweishler, a German, kept the first hotel. At this time the post-office was kept by Jacob Keiser at Clark's Ferry in the stone store-house.

A Mr. Keaseberry was the first postmaster after the office was moved to Petersburg.

The tories mustered their troops during the Revolutionary War on Young's Hill.

The oldest church in Petersburg was the Methodist church, which was dedicated in 1838. The first preaching in the town by this denomination was in a Mr. Brooks' dwelling house in 1812.

The Presbyterian congregation of the Juniata church, on the hill west of the junction, included the members in Petersburg, with many who lived on the opposite side of the river in Watts township. Rev. Joseph Brady, whose remains rest in the grave-yard belonging to the church, was the pastor at this time (1838).

The grave-yard on the property owned by Mr Charles Godshall is the oldest Methodist burial ground in the county. The oldest house in the neighborhood of Duncannon was near the position of Jones' mill. The brick house there now was built in 1800.

Along Sherman's creek, near the river, are the Duncannon Iron Works, owned by a company which has been in the business for many years in that place. These works consist of a rolling mill and nail factory; the latter is capable of turning out from 800 to 1,000 kegs, 100lbs each, per week. There is an extensive anthracite furnace in operation, closer to the river.

The extensive flour and lumber mills, recently owned by Major Griffith Jones, have passed into other hands.

A company has purchased an extensive tract of land, and, by means of a building association, is fast creating a new western addition to the old town.

Duncannon public schools have always been among the best in the county.

Newport was laid out as a village of Juniata township in 1814, by Daniel Reider. It was called Reiderville until the formation of Perry county in 1820, when sanguine hopes were entertained that it would be the county seat; hence its name was changed to New Port, which has since been conveniently modified to Newport.

Its growth was very tardy until the canal was made, since which it steadily improved, until about six years ago, since which it has made good its claims to be the largest town in the county.

It has a deposit bank, a printing office, from which issue the weekly editions of the Newport News, two steam tanneries, one of which is the most extensive in the county, a steam planing mill, marble-yard, three commission warehouses, a boat-yard, and an anthracite furnace just ready to be put in operation. Three churches supply the various congregations. Two of these are large brick edifices on the modern plan, owned by the Methodist and Reformed congregations, while the third is a frame building likely soon to be superseded by several others, since it is used by the Lutherans and Presbyterians, and others, on the union principle.

A tract of land was purchased and laid out in lots by Mr. J. B. Habecker. This part of the town attracts considerable business now. These lots will doubtless soon be improved through the efforts of a building association recently organized.

Newport has tasteful and commodious hotels, kept by gentlemanly and intelligent proprietors. But it cannot truthfully be avoided that her educational interest is below par. This is not owing to the want of a large and commodious school building, for that was erected in 1866, on a plan which compelled the admiration of all her sister boroughs, but a lack of fostering interest by her entire community has caused the failure, in part, of every educational project which contemplated permanency.

In 1840 Newport was next to Liverpool in the number of its population. It then had 423, and Liverpool had 454 inhabitants.

New Buffalo was laid out as a village of Buffalo township, Perry county, in 1800, by Jacob Baughman. It is situated on the west bank of the Susquehanna river, nineteen miles above Harrisburg.

It has been a town of steady growth, and contained in 1840 between thirty and forty dwelling houses and 200 inhabitants. The location is pleasant, surrounded on either side by charming natural scenery.

The present county seat was fixed upon by the fourth set of "disinterested persons" provided for in the act of separation, and named Bloomfield, on account of that being the title given to the tract of land in the patent. The set of commissioners who concluded this important work, were Messrs. Laycock, Sheets, Pearce and Jenks. Bloomfield was auspiciously appropriate for the new town from the fact that its original plot was marked out in a clover field when in full bloom in the month of June, 1822. It is healthfully located in the narrow, fertile and beautiful Mahonoy Valley, twenty-six miles from Harrisburg, and five from the Central railroad.

Large brick church edifices have been erected by the Reformed, Lutheran, Methodist and Presbyterian congregations.

A brick school-house, sufficiently large to accommodate all the pupils, has been erected recently. Bloomfield Academy, more fully noticed under Educational History, continues its good work at this place. It is now owned by William Grier, Esq.

The manufactories of the place are a steam tannery and a foundry.

The Perry Forrester, for August, 1826, contains the following description of the place: "New Bloomfield has eighteen buildings besides from twelve to fifteen shops and stables." The offices and public documents of the county were removed to Bloomfield on the 12th and 13th of March, 1827.

The Forrester, in 1829, gives the population of Bloomfield at 220, the number of dwellings, twenty-nine, and the shops and offices, twenty-one.

The court-house, erected in 1824-5, was remodeled in 1867-8. It is now well adapted for the purpose. A large clock has been placed in its cupola by the citizens of Bloomfield, aided by the county commissioners.

There are four printing offices belonging to as many weekly newspapers.

The President Judge of the Ninth Judicial District resides here.

The people are social and intelligent.

Marysville was laid out by Theophilus Fenn, the proprietor of the land on which it is built, as a village of Rye township, and up to April 12, 1866, was never incorporated, when it was incorporated as Haley, which was the name given to the post-office for a year or more. Since its incorporation, Marysville has improved so rapidly that it now ranks third in the county in number of population.

The round-house of the Northern Central railroad is located here, and added to this there is an extensive "shifting-yard."

Two railroad bridges cross the Susquehanna at the eastern and western termini of the town. The eastern bridge is on the line of the Pennsylvania Central, and the western on that of the Northern Central. There are two railroad stopping-places, one a regular depot, and the other merely a stopping-place. The depot is called Marysville, and is at the extreme west of the town, where the railroads cross each other.

A block-house was built at the end of the Central railroad bridge to guard it from the attacks of rebel invaders during the late war.

Marysville has a fine location, which, added to its proximity to Harrisburg, and the other probabilities of its rapid improvement, will cause it to be, in the extent and variety of its business, and the number of its inhabitants, the largest town in the county, in 1880. Marysville public schools are kept in operation from six to seven months of the year.

Loysville, formerly called Andersonville, was laid out in 1840, by Michael Loy. The commodious Academy building, north of the town, which was erected by Mr. John Tressler, continued to be liberally patronized as a higher institution of learning, until the 8th of May, 1865, when it was selected for a Soldiers' Orphan School. After it had been in operation four or five years as an orphan school for the children of deceased soldiers, the Tressler heirs sold the building to the Lutheran Church, since which it has been continued as Loysville Orphan Home, receiving as many soldiers' orphans as could be accommodated without crowding out the church orphans. There were 83 in this Home on the 31st of May, 1871.

Loysville has a large brick church, owned by the Reformed and Lutheran denominations. About one-half mile south-east of Loysville, is the farm and houses appropriated for the use of the poor of the county. The old buildings, two or three in number, have been superseded by the most expensive edifice in the county, estimated to cost, when entirely finished, upward of $30,000.

Andersonburg is a post-village of Madison township, and was so named on account of the land formerly belonging to Judge Anderson.

About three-fourths of a mile to the north-east are the grounds and buildings of the justly-celebrated Andersonburg Soldiers' Orphan School. The extent of ground was reported on the 31st of May, 1871, to be twenty-four acres, and the number of pupils enrolled, 133.

Hon. Martin Motzer has been the principal since the organization of the school, and so satisfactory has been the treatment of the wards entrusted to his care, that complaint against the school has never been heard abroad.

Blain.—William Douglass built the mill from which the name of the post-office (Douglass' Mill) was obtained. He soon after built the stone house occupied at the present (1872) by Mr. Jeremiah Hench. This stone house and an old log house which was torn down about six years ago, constituted what was known as Multicaulisville.

The original part of Blain was laid out on land granted by warrant in 1765, to James Blain. That part of the village west of Main street, was laid out on land originally granted by warrant, in 1762, to Abraham Mitchell, and the north part was warranted to James Morrison, in 1766.

In the spring of 1846 Francis W. Woods sold three acres of land to Dr. William Hays, which he divided into twelve lots and sold them out to different parties. John Seager and William Shively erected the first house in the fall of 1846.

The first post-office was kept by William Douglass. Capt. David Moreland and Anthony Black succeeded. In 1840 Anthony Black got the name of the post-office changed to Multicaulisville, to commemorate his great speculation in the morus multicaulis or Italian mulberry trees, which he was engaged in selling at ten cents each.

Soon after Blain was laid out in 1846, James and Francis W. Woods got the name of the post-office changed from Multicaulisville to Blain, and from the post-office the village was named.

The site of Blain is naturally the prettiest in the county. This fact seems to be recognized, for we find improvements here not found in any other town in the county. It is the only town into which and along whose streets water is conveyed in pipes. The buildings are mostly new, elegantly and substantially built and neatly painted.

It has a select school in charge of Prof. Gard. C. Palm, and one of the finest churches in the county. This church belongs to the Lutherans and Presbyterians, and was built to take the place of a venerable old building erected in 1816. The old folks of these congregations were very loath to exchange the old church even for such an elegant new one, from the fact that it seemed to link them to the past. The shingles that covered it were carried across the Conecocheaque Mountain on the backs of pack-horses. Their fathers and mothers reared this temple, and they did not like to see it destroyed.

New Germantown, a post-town of Toboyne township, was laid out by Solomon Sheibley, and named to commemorate Germantown, near Philadelphia. It is twenty-three and a quarter miles from Bloomfield, and is the western terminus of Rice's stage route in the county. It contains several stores and churches, a tannery and a school-house, in which a graded school is kept open during the free school term.

Ickesburg and Eschol are the post-villages of Saville township. The former is the older, and is the starting-point of Mr. Samuel Rice's stage, which makes a round trip on alternate days from Millerstown and Newport carrying the mail to and from Donnally's, Eschol, Milford and Markelville.

Eschol was formerly known as "Shuman's." It was early settled by Mr. Andrew Shuman, who gave the land on which St. Andrew's Lutheran Church is situated.

Donnally's mills is a post-village of a half-dozen houses in Tuscarora township. Geo. W. Lobaugh, Esq., keeps a store and a post-office at this place, and metes out justice to deserving offenders.

Milford and Markelville are post villages of Juniata township. Each contains a store in which the post-office is kept.

The former was called Jonestown after its earliest settler and first postmaster, Joseph Jones, Esq. Markelville was formerly known as Bosserman's Mills until Mr. George Markel so changed the place by his enterprise and thrift that it was named after him.

The following is the essential part of each section of an Act erecting part of Cumberland county into a separate county to be called Perry :

* SECTION 19th. The poor of Perry county to be

SECTION II.—THE WAR RECORD.

CHAPTER I.

REVOLUTIONARY WAR, 1775-83.

ENGLEHART WORMLEY, of Tyrone township, died on the 28th of August, 1827. He participated in the disastrous battle on Long Island, and the subsequent engagements which followed. He was never injured during his term of service.

ANDREW BURD, of Greenwood township, entered the army as a fifer-boy when but fourteen years old and served the faithful seven, being discharged when he had just attained his majority.

BENJAMIN BONSALE, SEN., of Greenwood township, died in 1845, aged 89 years. He served in the militia during the "freezing and starving" winter at Valley Forge, THOMAS BROWN, of Tyrone township, was a Revolutionary soldier, and so thoroughly imbued with love of his country that he made provision in his will for the reading of the Declaration of Independence over his open grave, after which a minister was to pray for him and his beloved country.

EDWARD DONNELLY, of Buckwheat Valley, Tuscarora township, served in the militia.

ALEXANDER GAILY, of Penn township, died in Cove Valley on the 13th of November, 1842, aged 102 years. He served in the Revolutionary army.

FREDERICK WATT, a Revolutionist, was at the massacre of Wyoming, where he served under Colonel Zebulon Butler, who "boldly met and bravely fought the combined British, Tory and Indian force of thrice his number." In this engagement he was wounded in the mouth.

He settled in Watt's Valley, Miller township, to which he gave his name, and there resided until his death.

ANDREW LYNCH, of Tuscarora township, served in the Revolutionary army, but of what date or length of term, whether volunteer or militia, we could not learn.

BENJAMIN ESSICK, of Liverpool township, died at the advanced age of 93. He served in the militia.

DAVID FOCHT, was a Revolutionary soldier, and one of the first settlers of western Perry county. He lived in Jackson township.

WILLIAM HEIM, the father of Rev. John William Heim, removed from Mahanoy township, Northumberland county, to Jackson township, Perry county, in 1815, where he died on the 2d of March, 1856. He was the last surviving hero of the Revolution living in the county. He died aged 95, and his funeral was attended by one hundred and fifty riders on horseback. Mr. Heim is said to have been able to relate many incidents of the contests in which he was engaged, but they were never written, and have now passed into that history which no living recollection can recall. He asked the National Government to reward his services, but being unable to furnish other evidence than the existence of his name on the roll of his company, he never received the pension to which he was justly entitled. The State recognized his services by a small yearly annuity.

There were from Watts township, then Greenwood, in the Revolutionary army, John Buchanan, whose descendants are now living in the townships of Greenwood and Liverpool; Robert Moody, Mr. Mountz, Mr. Philips, William Rodgers and William Philips. These men were all distinguished for their patriotism, but of their achievements in the sanguinary struggle which gave us a nation, no detailed account can be gathered.

WILLIAM PATTERSON served in the patriot army one year. He lived in that part of Duncannon known as Petersburg. It was then scarcely a village of Rye township. Mr. Patterson remembered the tories mustering on Young's Hill.

PETER KIPP served seven years as a soldier in the American army. He returned home after Cornwallis surrendered at Yorktown, and lived for many years afterward in Buffalo township.

GEORGE ALBRIGHT, one of the first settlers of Buck's Valley, shouldered his musket at the breaking out of the war, and went forth to serve his country as a soldier, while his wife, with a servant girl and several small boys, did the farming. Mrs. Albright and her servant girl took her grain to the banks of the Susquehanna on horseback, where they hitched their horses, and placing it in a canoe, pushed down the river to the nearest mill, at Dauphin. Here they waited until the grain was ground into flour, which was then placed in the canoe, and pushed back, up the stream, by the two women, landed and placed on the backs of their horses, and thus taken home.

Mr. Albright returned home at the close of the war, and lived the remainder of his life as a citizen of the valley he had helped to defend. He was a member of the Lutheran Church, which he lived to see prosper in the home of his adoption. He died at an advanced age, and his remains lie buried in the soil of the valley, in a spot sacred to the memory of every lover of his country. We would not less nobly consecrate the spot in which the no less self-sacrificing wife of his bosom was buried.

The following will show that Perry county was not free from Tories during the Revolution:

CUMBERLAND COUNTY, SS.:

Before me, George Robinson, one of His Majesty's Justices, for said county, personally appeared Clefton Bowen, who, being duly examined and sworn, doth depose and say: that sometime in the month of January last, he, this deponent, was in the house of John Montgomery, in Tyrone township, in company with a certain Edward Erwin, of Rye township, and this deponent says he then and there heard said Erwin drink damnation and confusion to the Continental Congress, and damn their proceedings, saying they were all a parcel of damned rebels, and against spring would be cut off like a parcel of snowbirds, and more such stuff.

Sworn and subscribed before George Robinson, 19th February, 1776.

CLEFTON BOWEN.

CHAPTER II.

WAR OF 1812-15.

During the early part of the year 1814 Governor Simon Snyder ordered that a thousand militia be raised in Pennsylvania to assist in repelling the British invasion on the Canada frontier. About one-half of this number was composed of volunteers from Cumberland county; the residue were raised principally by draft from the counties of Franklin, York and Adams. These soldiers constituted the Eleventh regiment or division, and were commanded by General Porter, and led by Colonel James Fenton, Lieut. Col. Robert Bull, Majors Galloway and Marlin. The Cumberland county troops were rendezvoused at Carlisle, from which place they were marched to Pittsburg, thence to Black Rock Fort, now the site of the thriving city of Buffalo, which place they reached about the 1st of April. They remained here in encampment, engaged in drill and guard duty, until the 2d of July, when General Brown, contrary to the expectation of his officers who had made preparation for the celebration of the Fourth in camp, and invited the commander to participate, issued orders to embark the troops next morning at daylight.

The army consisted of two brigades. The first commanded by General Scott, with the artillery corps in charge of Major Hurdman, landed nearly a mile below, while General Ripley, in command of the second brigade, disembarked about the same distance above Fort Erie. A battery of long eighteens was soon planted in position to command the fort, while a flag was dispatched with the demand to surrender in two hours or the bombardment would be commenced. At the end of the truce, 137 men including officers, marched out and surrendered themselves prisoners of war. Thus was carried out Generals Brown and Scott's determination to eat their Fourth of July dinners in Fort Erie. The day was one of busy preparation for an aggressive movement against the enemy's army, which was composed of the British's supposed invincibles, then encamped at the mouth of the Chipewa. Before daylight, however, on the morning of the fifth, it was ascertained that the three days' rations, ordered to be supplied to the troops, could not be furnished until a boat could be dispatched to Buffalo and return with them. This caused a delay until two o'clock in the afternoon, before the army of about 3,500 were ready to march and it was four o'clock before the militia came in sight of the regular troops who had preceded them.

Scarcely had they halted when there was a requisition made for volunteers to drive off the Indians, who had been annoying the pickets by firing upon them from their places of concealment. This was answered by about three hundred volunteers, composed of officers, who exchanged their swords for muskets, and private soldiers from the Eleventh regiment, strengthened by several hundred friendly Indians, commanded by General Porter, Colonel Bull and Major Galloway. An order commanding every white man who went with General Porter to leave his hat and go with his head uncovered, was issued before starting. The Indians tied up their heads with muslin and blackened their faces by rubbing their hands over burnt stumps before starting. Thus equipped the skirmishers started, and in less than half an hour were engaged in the battle known in history as Chippewa, during the progress of which Colonel Bull, Major Galloway, Captain White, and a number of private soldiers were surrounded by Indians, who, concealed in the high grass, had permitted the main body of the troops to pass, that they might the more safely and effectually secure the officers. Having disarmed their prisoners they next commenced stripping them of their clothing, one taking a coat, another a vest while a third claimed the neckcloth. If a shirt showed a ruffle anywhere a fourth claimed it. Major Galloway and private Wendt were stripped of their boots and compelled to march through thorn and other stubble barefoot, until, in the language of the latter, "their feet were run through and through."

The party had advanced their prisoners but a short distance until they were halted, and there was evidently an Indian dissatisfied about something. They started again, and had scarce gone more than half a mile when the dissatisfied Indian, then in the rear, whooped loudly, raised his rifle and shot Colonel Bull through the body. The ball entered the left shoulder and came out through the right breast. After he was pierced with the bullet, Colonel Bull raised himself on his elbow, reached out his hand to Major Galloway and said, "Help me, Wendt, I am shot!" The help implored by the dying man was prevented by the Indian who had shot him coming up, sinking his tomahawk into his head and scalping him.

This act, so contrary to all laws of human warfare, was no doubt in compliance with the order of General Riall, which was in substance not to spare any who wore the uniform of militia officers, while those who wore the regular officer's uniform were to be brought into camp in safety. To this fact we ascribe the cruel fate of a brave soldier and good officer.

His surviving comrades bear testimony to the sober and exemplary habits of Colonel Bull. At Erie, it is said, he spent his Sabbaths in the hospital among the sick, ministering to their physical wants, or reading and conversing with them about the truths of religion.

My informant, Michael Donnelly, Esq., volunteered to go aboard of Perry's fleet, then operating on Lake Erie, expecting to be gone two or three days at most, but did not get back to his company until twenty-eight days afterward.

The following persons from Perry county were members of Captain David Moreland's company mustered in 1814 and rendezvoused at Carlisle:

Companies D and H of the 47th Regiment were mustered in Perry county, and on the 27th of January, 1862, sailed with the Third Brigade, Brigadier General Brannan commanding, in the steamship Oriental, for Key West, Florida, where they remained until the 18th of the following June, when they embarked for Hilton Head, S. C., where they arrived on the 22d. Engaged in no battles, but for their attention to duty, discipline and soldierly bearing, their regiment received the highest commendation from Generals Hunter and Brannan. Gen. O. M. Mitchell assumed command of the Department of the South on the 16th of September, and an expedition to penetrate Florida and remove obstructions in the St. John River consisted in part of the 47th Regiment. Landing at Waysport Mills on the 1st of October, the campaign was opened by operations directed against St. John's Bluff, a strongly fortified point, five miles from the mouth of St. John's River. Moving on the 2d of October, through swamps and pine woods, by a circuit of twenty-five miles, the 47th in advance, constantly skirmishing with, and driving the enemy as they went, the command bivouacked at night, in rear of the fort, in sight of the rebel works. In the morning it was found that the rebels had evacuated the fort under cover of the night, leaving eleven pieces of artillery, in excellent order, and an immense quantity of ammunition.

The artillery, ammunition and materials captured at St. John's Bluff, were placed upon steamers, and the command taken to Hilton Head, S. C., where they arrived on the 7th, the object of the expedition having been accomplished, with a loss to the 47th of only two wounded. The regiment was next engaged at Pocotaligo. The 47th was detailed as an escort at the burial of, and fired the first salute over the grave of Gen. O. M. Mitchell, who died on the 30th of September. It returned to Key West on the 18th of November, where it remained until the 25th of February, when it was ordered to Louisiana. It was next assigned to an expedition under command of Gen. Banks. The Perry county companies were first engaged during this expedition at Pleasant Hill, the engagement at Cane Hill followed, after which, on the 20th of June, the regiment moved by steamer to New Orleans. On the 5th of July, the regiment embarked on the steamer McJellian, and arrived at Washington on the 12th. The corps to which the 47th belonged was the 10th. This was assigned to General Hunter's command, which it joined near Snicker's Gap, and was engaged in the defense of the National Capitol, and in expelling the rebels from Maryland. The 47th was placed in command of Gen. Sheridan soon after the battle of Antietam, and was thenceforward known as the Army of the Shenandoah.

The battle of Opequan, in which the 47th participated, was fought on the 19th of September; Fisher's Hill, on the 21st. On the 17th of October the regiment proceeded on a reconnaissance to Strasburg, and on the 19th participated in the battle of Cedar Creek. In this battle, Chaplain W. D. C. Rodrock is spoken of as "rendering effective service, and receiving a bullet through his hat. In every battle in which the regiment was engaged, save that at Pocotaligo Bridge, where he was detailed to take charge of the wounded, the chaplain was at the post of duty."

On the morning of the 3d of January, 1866, the regiment embarked for New York, where, after a stormy passage, it arrived safely, and proceeded by rail to Philadelphia. It had seen service in seven of the Southern States, participating in the most exhausting campaigns, marched more than twelve hundred miles, and made twelve voyages at sea. It was the only Pennsylvania regiment that belonged to the Red River expedition, or that served in that Department, until after the surrender of Lee. On the 9th of January, after a term of service of four years and four months, it was mustered out at Camp (adwalader.

Of the Field and Staff Officers belonging to the 47th, there were from Perry county: Elisha W. Baily, Surgeon, Sept. 24, 1861; mustered out Sept. 23, 1864—expiration of term. Rev. W. D. C. Rodrock Chaplain, Aug. 14, 1861; commissioned Oct. 31, 1861; remustered, Sept. 18, 1864; mustered out with regiment, Dec. 25, 1865.

The Ninety-Second first met the enemy at Lebanon, Tenn., where they signally defeated the notorious rebel leader, John Morgan. The regiment was next engaged in covering the retreat of General Nelson, after the disastrous battle of Richmond, Ky. It had a sharp encounter with Jenkins' Cavalry, at Shelbyville. At Perryville it was highly praised by General Buell. It next made a raid across the Pine, Cumberland and Clinch Mountains, and burned the bridge spanning the Watauga. They crossed the Virginia and Tennessee Railroad, and moving down the railroad ten or twelve miles, destroyed a trestle work of near a mile, when they turned the direction of their march toward Kentucky, reaching Nickolasville, on the night of the 13th of January. It was engaged at Franklin two days after its return, and for the heroic part that it bore in this action it was honorably mentioned in special orders by Gen. Rosecrans. It took part in the battle of Chickamauga, Tenn. It fought in the initial movements of the battles of Rover, Middletown, Shelbyville and Elk River. At Cowan it captured two hundred of Bragg's rear guard. In the winter of '63 and spring of '64, it fought in the battles of Dandridge, New Market, Mosey Creek and Fair Garden. After the furlough of thirty days it returned to Louisville, where Colonel Jordan defeated the well-laid plans of John Morgan, to cut off from his base of supplies General Sherman, who was then far on his march to Atlanta. The regiment marched next to Nashville, and thence to Chattanooga, arriving on the 2d of September. By order of Gen. J. B. Steadman, the regiment started at once in pursuit of the rebel General Wheeler, who was crossing the mountains with all his cavalry into Middle Tennessee, and on the morning of the 6th, on the Woodbury and M'Ninnville Road to Readyville, it attacked and defeated General Dibberel's Brigade of Wheeler's command. In acknowledgment of Colonel Jordan's good conduct and that of the troops under his command, of which the Ninth Pennsylvania constituted two-thirds, complimentary orders were issued to Generals Van Cleve at Murfreesboro, Milroy at Tullahoma, and Steadman at Chattanooga.

The regiment joined General Sherman at Marietta, Ga., and on the 14th of November started on its march to the sea. On the 16th it encountered General Wheeler, who occupied the old works of the enemy at Lovejoy's Station, on the Macon Railroad. The position was occupied by the brigade, and the guns manned by the regiment, and retained by it until the end of the war. Frequently engaged in skirmishes in December, it fought in the battle of Bear Creek. At Buck Head Creek, it was attacked by Wheeler's Cavalry with the hope of cutting it off from the main army, already across the stream, but by a bold charge the enemy was repulsed, and the regiment joined the main command. General Dibberel's Division of Wheeler's Cavalry was found in line of battle at Buckhead church, and defeated by the Ninth. Again the enemy made a stand at Waynesboro, where they were defeated, and retreated across Briar Creek, on the road leading to Augusta. After a month's delay, the regiment entered South Carolina and at Blackwell defeated a portion of Wheeler's command. A short time after this it encountered Wheeler and Hampton, who were signally repulsed, and the Ninth, with the brigade to which it was attached, moved as far as Black Stake's Station, North Carolina, on the Columbia and Charlotte Railroad, where it met and defeated a force of the enemy. On the 16th of March it was engaged at Aversboro, in an action which lasted from six in the morning until two in the afternoon. On the 19th it participated in the hotly-contested field near Bentonville. On the morning of the 11th of April, the cavalry struck the head of the enemy's retreating columns, and compelled them to retreat toward Hillsboro, and on the morning of the 13th, the First Brigade, to which the Ninth belonged, entered the city of Raleigh, and after passing through the city, the enemy under Wheeler and Hampton was found in position on the Hillsboro' Road. The Ninth bore the brunt of the engagement which followed.

At Morrisville, to which the enemy fled, pursued by the cavalry, they were again defeated, and the flag of truce which came to deliver the letter sent by Joseph E. Johnson, directed to General Sherman, asking the terms of surrender, was received by the Ninth. The last guns fired in Sherman's command were from the battery of the Ninth Pennsylvania Cavalry. It was mustered out of service at Lexington, Ky., on the 18th day of July, '65.

In the first week in November, the One Hundred and Fourth Regiment reported for duty with eleven hundred and thirty-five, officers and men, and was ordered to Washington. This regiment was first engaged at Bottom's Bridge, followed by Savage Station, in which it lost one killed and four wounded. Fair Oaks, Allen's Farm, Peninsula, Malvern Hill, and Harrison's Landing, are memorable on account of engagements in Virginia.

On the 28th of December the brigade to which the One Hundred and Fourth belonged, sailed from Fortress Monroe for Beaufort, South Carolina. On the 5th of April, the One Hundred and Fourth embarked for a movement against Charleston, but before it had debarked the attack by the fleet was at an end, and the land forces returned to their previous encampments.

The other engagements in which this regiment participated were, Morris Island and the attempt to capture Charleston. Toward the close of July it was ordered to Florida, and was posted for guard along the line of the railroad from Jacksonville to Baldwin, where it remained about a month, when it was sent north. It landed at Alexandria, Va., and was assigned to duty in the fortifications on the south side of the Potomac, where it remained until its term of enlistment expired.

The veterans of the One Hundred and Fourth were joined to the Army of the Potomac and participated in the assault in front of Petersburg, on the 3d and 4th of April, and followed in pursuit of the rebel army as far as Chesterfield Station. After these engagements the regiment did guard and provost duty until the 25th of August, when it was mustered out of service.

The One Hundred and Thirty-Third Regiment, commanded by Colonel Frank B. Speakman, did picket duty in Virginia until they were ordered to take up their line of march to meet, in Maryland, a defiant enemy threatening the border counties of Pennsylvania. It arrived on the battle-field of Antietam on the morning of September 18th, but the enemy had retired, and the regiment moved to an encampment one mile from Sharpsburg, on the Shepherdstown road, where it remained engaged in company and battalion drill until near the close of October, when the army moved into Virginia, to begin the campaign of Fredericksburg, under Burnside.

On the 13th of December the regiment was ordered across the river, to engage in the battle of Fredericksburg, where it remained engaged in active duty until the morning of the 15th, when it recrossed the river. The loss in the regiment in this engagement was three commissioned officers killed, and eight wounded; seventeen enlisted men killed, one hundred and twenty-nine wounded, and twenty-seven missing.

The regiment engaged in the battle of Chancellorsville on the 3d of May, with a loss of one killed—Adjutant Edward C. Bendere, and nine wounded. Its term of service expired soon after this battle, and returning to Harrisburg on the 19th, nine months from its departure, it was mustered out the succeeding week.

The Seventeenth was engaged near White House Landing, on the 21st of June; at Jones Bridge, on the 23d; at Charles City Court House on the 24th.

In August, the Seventeenth, under General Sheridan, commenced operations in the Shenandoah Valley, and was engaged at the following places: Front Royal; on the 23d of August at Kearneysville. At Smithfield on the 29th; at White Post on the 1st of September; at Berryville and Buncetown on the Opequan on the 7th, and at Bunker Hill on the 13th.

The Seventeenth was with General Sheridan at Winchester. The Seventeenth was again engaged at White's Ford, in the Valley of Virginia.

On the 24th of February, '65, General Sheridan led the cavalry in a grand raid upon the James River Canal, in the rear of Richmond. It was engaged in the successive battles and skirmishes, until the rebels laid down their arms to the Union forces at Appomattox Court House, and was mustered out of service on the 10th of June. Company I formed part of the Second Provisional Cavalry, and was mustered out of service on the 7th of August, at Louisville, Ky.

"This regiment," said General Devin, "in five successive campaigns, and in over three score engagements, nobly sustained their part."

The Two Hundred and Eighth Regiment was officered on the 12th of September, with Alfred B. M'Calmont Colonel; M. F. Heintzelman, Lieutenant Colonel, and Alexander Bobb, Major. On the 13th it started for the front, and, immediately upon its arrival, was assigned to duty.

It was in command of General Hartranft at Hatcher's Run, in February, 1865, and at Fort Steadman, on the 25th of March. The result at Fort Steadman, chiefly the work of the 208th, gained General Hartranft's promotion to Major General. It next attacked the rebel works in front of Fort Sedgewick, on the 2nd of April.

The Two Hundred and Eighth had moved with its division upon the line of the South Side Railroad, to Nottoway Court House, on the 9th of April, when the news of the surrender of Lee was received.

All the regiment but the new recruits were mustered out of service on the 1st of June, 1865.

SECTION III.—EDUCATIONAL.

CHAPTER I.

The earliest educational history of Perry county, for want of records, can only be obtained from the narratives that have descended from generation to generation until the year 1834, when an era dawned upon Pennsylvania, such as has never been estimated in importance.

The first schools were subscription, kept open about three months, or “a quarter” of the year.

These schools were few and far between, and governed absolutely by the teacher.

Then good scholarship consisted in ciphering to the double rule of three, a term happily omitted in modern arithmetic, in being able to write legibly large and small hand, and ability to read readily in the Bible and Testament.

These schools were often kept in houses very poorly suited for the purpose; slab seats and slab writing-boards pinned to the logs of the wall, served as furniture.

The earliest school legislation was an act passed on the 28th of March, 1814, vesting the title of a certain piece of land in Toboyne township, in the county of Cumberland, in certain trustees and their successors, for the use of a school. The Act is short, and we give it in full as an instance of the liberality of the Commonwealth at that time toward educational enterprises :

SECTION 1. The Land officers to make a title clear of purchase money and fees to trustees for schools to be established in the township of Toboyne for a piece of land.

SEC. 2. A majority of subscribers to supply vacancies of trustees.

After the Act of 1822, requiring county commissioners to receive from their parents or guardians the names of all children between the ages of five and twelve years, whose parents were unable to school them—this Act imposed a fine of five dollars upon these officers for a neglect of duty—houses began to be erected in the various settlements of the county. Fifty years ago, the only school-house in Fishing Creek Valley, Rye township, was near the present residence of Mr. Kocher. This house was covered with clap-boards, the common roofing material of the houses or cabins of the valley at that time, and had no floor. It was lighted through single panes of glass fastened side by side between parts of two logs. So limited a knowledge was deemed necessary for the school-teacher of these times, that it is related “a school-master” wanted to keep school in this house who was unable to either write with a pen or give instruction in arithmetic. It is further related, to the credit of the patrons, that he was refused the privilege he asked.

The books used in this school were Dillworth’s spelling-book, the Testament, DaBoll's arithmetics, and copy-books made of unruled paper.

The oldest school-house in Penn township was a log building, covered with boards split out of logs. This house was located near Young's Mill. The first school kept in it was by Joseph McIntire, and was attended by pupils who lived within the present boundaries of Rye township. Some of these pupils walked four miles, morning and evening, to avail themselves of the educational advantages of being able to read, write and cipher.

The furniture of this house was slab benches, writing boards of the same material fixed to the walls, and an old smoky stove. Mr. McIntire is represented to have been "severe with the hickory." He heard four lessons from each pupil in reading per day, "made and mended" their pens, and "showed" them in ciphering whenever they came to him for assistance. The custom then was for the pupil to hear the class read while the teacher "worked his sum."

The oldest school-house in Duncannon, formerly Petersburg, was built of logs, and stood on the ground in front of the one now in use in that borough. It was burnt in 1814.

The ruins of the only school-house in Buck's Valley, during its early settlement, may still be seen near the base of Halfall Hills. It stands on a truly romantic spot, and was probably one of the oldest school-houses within the limits of the county.

Who administered school discipline and taught the youthful ideas to shoot, at its first session, has not been certainly preserved.

An old school-house in Pfoutz's Valley not very far from Hart's mill, served to give educational advantages to pupils of both Pfoutz's and Wildcat valleys, until Wright's and Grubb's school-houses were built in 1836. Millerstown at this time was a village of Greenwood township.

The oldest school-house at Liverpool was situated on the site of the present Lutheran church, and was either removed or in ruins in 1828, when the church was built, for, it is said, that the cornerstone of the church was laid on the spot where the old school-house had stood. Rev. Heim's journal contains the following: "On the 17th of December, 1814, in the evening, I preached at Stollenberger's school-house, from Eph. v. 14."

In this same old school-house, in 1810, Rev. Heim organized the Lutheran congregation, whose descendants worship in the church which stands so high above it now. In it, too, the early settlers' children of Liverpool town and township received the elements of their education.

Millerstown has a venerable old school building, which antedates the free-school system. This house, enlarged to meet the growing educational wants of the place, still stands on its old site. It was used for religious meetings until the churches were built.

The first school-house in Tuscarora township was situated in the narrows leading from Donnally's mills to Buckwheat Valley. It was built of logs, and known, at that time, as the "Narrow's School." To this house the Bulls, Blacks, Robinsons and Henches, of the second generation, came to receive an education. The next school-house was built on the property now owned by Joseph Leonard. These houses served the purpose until they were supplemented by the seven which are now in use.

Saville township has a sacred school history, from the fact that she has been the birth-place and early home of more Christian ministers than any township in the county.

The old school-houses were situated originally, one below Ickesburg, near Judge Elliott's farm, another on the Irvin estate, and a third just below Sandy Hill, in Madison township. These were all, in their day, in Tyrone township. These old houses in Saville have been improved by the third edition. The last is credited first in the county.

Tyrone has built and rebuilt school-houses until there are but two of the first houses erected for the purpose remaining, and these in the last formed settlements of Shafer's and Kennedy's valleys. Tyrone is a progressive district, awake to the fact that the best school economy is well-built and well-furnished school-houses, and the best qualified teachers in them, employed at liberal salaries.

In Landisburg, the earliest to move for free schools by legislative enactment, we would naturally expect to find the best school buildings. Instead, however, an old stone veteran of many years' service still serves the free-schools of the place. Spring township had an old school-house, located near St. Peter's church, which was used for religious worship by the Lutheran congregation, previous to the erection of the old log church in 1816.

Carl's (Charles') school-house about one mile and a-half east of Elliottsburg, was used by a Lutheran congregation from 1837 to 1840. This house was situated on a lot of seventeen acres of land, donated in his will for school purposes, by Henry Ludolph Spark. Mr. Spark had a school-house erected on this tract, in which he taught school for many years. He died, and lies buried in an old grave-yard near by. After Mr. Spark's death, a Mr. Carl succeeded him, and administered school affairs for twenty years, with such success as to have his name given to the school-house, which should have been called Spark's.

This donation of seventeen acres of land was expressly stated by Mr. Spark in his will, to be for a school-house and a school-teacher, but his idea of a school, with a teacher's home and gardens attached, has never been carried out in Little Germany (as this place came to be called).

The school-houses of Madison township were the ones mentioned in describing those of Saville and Sandy Hill, and the other at Center. These are believed to have been the oldest houses built for the purpose within the present limits of Madison township.

The brick building erected at Clark's for a graded and primary school, is a creditable structure for the purpose.

The oldest school-house in Toboyne township, as described by one who saw and went to school in it, was situated about twenty rods from Esquire Joshua Rowe's dwelling house. It was covered with clap-boards, had slat benches and writing-boards, and a wooden chimney. It had two windows, which emitted light through greased paper. The ceiling was made by laying poles across, close together, and then plastering on the top of them. The floor was made of split logs, fitted together by hewing the edges.

This, at that time, was the nearest approach from the East of a school-house to the Round Top Mountain.

Toboyne township is now pretty well supplied with school-houses, and manifests considerable interest in educational affairs.

New Germantown has a graded school, the only one in the township.

In Juniata township there is an old school-house at Markelville, which doubtless served the early settlers of that neighborhood. Markelville maintained quite a creditable school, without missing a session for nearly twelve years after Rev. A. R. Height's opened its first summer session.

The school was continued during Superintendent Height's term of office, in a building improvised for the purpose. Markelville Academy building was erected by Mr. George Markel. The school continued in this building after Mr. Markel's decease, but it soon became apparent that with his death the educational project lost its mainspring. After Rev. Height's term of office expired, he left the county, and was succeeded by Rev. Geo. Rea, Profs. Geo. W. Leisher, C. W. Super, and Mr. Alexander Stephens.

Juniata township has a proud array of young men of the present generation, who started as teachers in her public schools. Of these I cannot speak in other than general terms here, except of one, in whom many bright hopes centered, and of whom much was reasonably expected.

John Jones, jr., was born in Juniata township, near Milford, of highly respected parentage. He received a common-school preparation for the business of teaching, which he began in his seventeenth year, and continued during the annual four-months' term, until the winter of 1861 and '62.

In the spring of 1860, the writer of this sketch first became acquainted with young Jones, at Bloomfield Academy. Entering as farmerboys and strangers at the same time, we were soon fast friends. John was soon the acknowledged champion of the school; possessed of great muscular agility and power, he was always on the winner's side in the athletic games. His mind was as vigorous as his body, and proportionably powerful. He had a retentive memory, but his crowning intellectual development was his reasoning faculty. He continued his studies at Bloomfield Academy during the summer sessions of 1860 and 1861. He entered Iron City Commercial College in the fall of 1861; graduated and returned home, where he remained during the remainder of the winter. In the spring of 1862, he entered the law office of Hon.

B. F. Junkin, where he pursued the study of law until August, when he entered the Army of the Potomac, and served nine months in company G, 133d Pennsylvania regiment. In 1864, he served six months in Captain Frederick's company as sergeant, and, upon a recruiting officer of the Ninth Pennsylvania Regiment appearing in their midst and asking such as were willing to re-enlist to step out of the ranks, sixteen men said, "If our sergeant goes we will go!" whereupon Jones, under that religious conviction of duty which he never disobeyed, stepped out, and became a soldier of his country for three years longer. For a young man he possessed large and varied attainments, and his poems, "The Old Chestnut Tree," and "Our Country," show sufficiently his original merit. They were written in less than six months from the time he rhymed his first stanza.

A single stanza, the first from "Our Country," will give the reader an opportunity to judge of his versification:

"When maddened frenzy leads the van
And reason holds no sway,
It makes a demon out of man,
And darkness out of day."

John Jones was killed at Solemn Grove, North Carolina, March 10, 1865. He has left a record for patriotism characteristic of the man. He, the young, the talented, the noble, the brave, died that his country might live. Cherished be his memory!

One of Juniata township's old school-houses is in ruins on a place owned by Mr. Myers; another was near Milford, and a third is probably still standing, and, from the shape of its walls, is known as eight square.

Oliver township had three school-houses, some years ago, that were probably the first within her borders. Earlier educational advantages were afforded at the Myers and Milford schools in Juniata, to which this township originally belonged.

Some of the present school-houses in Center township were the original ones in the neighborhoods where they are found.

We have no authentic account of the first school-houses, other than that they were very few and far between.

Sutch's school-house, in Carroll township, was located on the south-east bank of Sherman's creek. The spot on which this house stood was consecrated anew by the erection of Mount Pisgah Evangelical Lutheran church on it. This school-house was erected some time between 1775 and 1780. It was the first school-house in Pisgah Valley, and, like Reiber's, built twenty or twenty-five years later, intended to serve the double purpose of church and school-house.

Of the other school-houses we have no other data than the fact that several of those now in use bear the impress of antiquity.

Wheatfield township has built new school-houses, which are all removed from the sites of the old ones. The old foundation of one might have been seen but a few years ago near Esquire Potter's; Center was another, and Fio used as a preaching place by the Lutheran congregation, who have since built "St. David's church," until 1845. Religious meetings are held in the school-houses of nearly all the townships in the county.

In many localities, for want of churches, this cannot be avoided; but wherever it can they should not be used for this purpose during the time that the schools are in session.

A remarkable instance of wise legislation in response to the petitions of the people, is seen in the act passed in 1831, which provided for the appointment of trustees of the public school-house in the town of Landisburg, Perry county, and gave them power to examine teachers for said school, to visit the same once a month, and to dismiss the teacher for misconduct, want of capacity, and negligence.—Sypher's Pennsylvania History.

From the county auditors' report for 1831, we learn that $171.17½ cents were expended by the county in instructing poor children. This amount, compared with $35,397.69, the amount levied and collected by taxation to support her schools in 1870, sufficiently indicates the progress that has been made in the thirty-nine intervening years, and with all this we seem to have progressed but slowly.

Under the pauper system, as it was appropriately called, there was a distinction, making an envious comparison between the rich and poor; so marked was this difference that it was the basis for two classes. The poor could hardly ever hope to rise from the stigma that was placed upon them by the aid intended to be a blessing.

After the Act of 1834, arrangements were made for building school-houses in every settled portion of the county; school-directors were elected who supervised the building of these houses, and selected teachers after an examination by the most competent of their own number, or some other person chosen by a majority of them.

Educational meetings previous to the adoption of the county superintendency in 1854, consisted in old-fashioned spelling and singing-schools. These had a healthy social influence on society, beside, in the former, much pride in spelling was created.

As an instance of one of these school meetings, we have a notice in the Forester, signed by Wm. B. Mitchell, Jesse Miller and Jacob Fritz, schoolmen. This meeting was advertised to be held May 7, 1825, and was no doubt intended to carry out the provisions of the Act of 1825, which had been previously printed in the columns of the same paper.

CHAPTER II.

THE SUPERINTENDENCY.

Rev. Adam R. Height, of Mechanicsburg, Cumberland county, accepted the call of the Lutheran charge of New Bloomfield and vicinity, and commenced his pastoral duties on the 1st of March, 1854. He continued to exercise the privilege of his calling until the meeting of synod at Shrewsbury, York county, Pa. In the following September, he was superseded by Rev. David H. Focht.

Rev. Height came to Perry in season to receive the lead of educational affairs in the county under the Act creating the county superintendency. The first triennial school convention met in the courthouse, New Bloomfield, on the 5th of June, 1854. The officers elected were Joseph Baily, President, and James L. Diven, Secretary.

A motion was made to fix the salary at $600, which was voted down, and the salary finally fixed at $300 per annum.

Rev. Height, elected by a majority of two votes, was commissioned soon after in the same month, and entered upon the actual duties of the office, the examination of teachers, in September.

Rev. Height's administration of school affairs shows him to have been zealous of their improvement, prompt and efficient in the discharge of his official duty. He used the press more extensively than any of his successors in office, and through it by making reports of visits and by giving suggestions, accomplished more than he received credit for doing, for in the succeeding convention he was defeated.

At the second triennial convention, which met in May, 1857, Rev. Theodore P. Bucher, a graduate of Pennsylvania College, was elected to succeed Superintendent Height. Rev. Bucher was a native of Cumberland county; he came to Perry county while a boy to serve as a clerk in Thatcher's store, at Newport. His studious and exemplary habits attracted the attention of the church of which he was a member, whose aid was thus invoked toward his collegiate education. Rev. Bucher had but recently completed his theological studies, when he was elected to fill the position of county superintendent.

During Superintendent Bucher's administration of school affairs, he was engaged in teaching during the summer in Mt. Dempsy Academy, Landisburg. The plan of visiting and examining teachers pursued by his predecessor was followed in the main.

A teachers' institute, at which were present Profs. Fordyce A. Allen and B. F. Taylor, of Chester county, was held during the holiday week of 1858, in the court-house, Bloomfield. This meeting was attended by many teachers from the various sections of the county, and was the first educational meeting attended by the writer, then a mere boy attending public school.

Superintendent Bucher resigned during the summer of 1859, and was succeeded by the appointment of Prof. Lewis Barnett Kerr, a native of Tuscarora township, whose commission dated from September 1, 1859. Mr. Kerr filled the unexpired term with such acceptance as to be elected at the third triennial convention, which met in May of 1860.

The educational work had progressed with such success up to this time, that there was a corps of teachers, in 1860, equal to the best that had ever been engaged in the schools of the county.

During the winter of 1860, three teachers' institutes were held, one at Landisburg, one at Petersburg, and another at Liverpool. These were all well attended. At the institute held at Landisburg, Prof. J. P. Wickersham, of the State Normal School, at Lancaster, was present, and gave instruction by drills and lectures.

In the superintendent's annual report for 1860, ten district institutes are mentioned as having been in operation, of which special prominence is given to the ones held in Liverpool, Madison and Penn. The school interest of the second and last years of Superintendent Kerr's administration became subsidiary to the all absorbing subject of war, which called from the school-room, workshop, and farm, the bravest and best. To supply the schools with teachers', inexperienced boys and young women were called into the ranks during the continuance of the war.

The fourth triennial convention met in Bloomfield, May 4th, 1863. An organization was effected by electing Major Kirk Haines, President, and Chas. A. Barnett and Wm. J. Stewart, Esqs., Secretaries.

There were present 82 of the 156 directors, representing the school districts of the county. Rye, Buffalo, Jackson and Toboyne townships were not represented. The convention proceeded to fill the office of county superintendent.

Motions to fix the salary; Henry Hopple moved the salary be $300; John Gray $300; C. S. Smith, $200, and John Wright $500. The vote was taken on each, until it was finally fixed at $300. This was $100 lower than had been paid to the previous superintendent.

During Superintendent Gantt's term, the special Act appropriating money from the county treasury to defray the expenses of one annual county teachers' institute was extended to Perry.

The salary was raised from $300 to $500, by a convention assembled for that purpose. Superintendent Gantt held county institutes at Bloomfield, Millerstown and Newport. District institutes were held in most of the townships in the county.

The fifth school convention met May, 1866, and elected, over Jacob Gantt and George W. Leisher, on the third ballot, Silas Wright, a native of Greenwood township. Mr. Wright was the first and then the only graduate of a State normal school, and not yet twenty-five years of age. His administration of school affairs was fearlessly aggressive, and brought out the croakers more than once through the columns of the county press.

The county teachers' institute held at Bloomfield during the holiday weeks of December, 1866, and 1867, and the one at Newport, during the same time for 1868, signalized a new era in the educational history of these associations. The best instructors were commanded from abroad, while, at the same time, home talent was allowed to evince itself.

Juniata Valley Normal School was first opened, for a summer session, at Newport, in April, 1867 it was opened in Millerstown in 1868, where it has been continued ever since. This school was begun and is still continued under the principalship of Silas Wright.

The sixth annual convention, May, 1869, was attended by seventy-six of the one hundred and sixty-eight school directors of the county. Four candidates were presented at this convention:

Lewis B. Kerr being elected over Silas Wright on the eleventh ballot, by eight votes. Educational progress during this administration of the school superintendency, is shown in better school-houses and in higher salaries to teachers ; but it is feared the average efficiency of the teachers hardly exhibits a proportional increase.

The seventh triennial convention, which met in Bloomfield on the 7th of May, 1872, was represented by 98 school directors, being from 25 districts. Howe, Watts and New Buffalo were unrepresented. The salary was voted $700 per annum. Gardner C. Palm, of Loysville, George C. Welker, of Liverpool, and Silas Wright, of Millers-town, were put in nomination. George C. Welker was elected over G. C. Palm, on the third ballot, by a majority of 8.

Jesse Miller was born in Millerstown, Perry county, Pa., in 1800. He became successively High Sheriff, State legislator, member of Congress, member of State Board of Canal Commissioners, Auditor of the Treasury Department, at Washington, and finally Secretary of the Commonwealth and Superintendent of Common Schools during the administration of Governor Shunk.

Mr. Miller is believed to have first directly suggested to the Legislature of Penn'a, the plan of each county having its own superintendent of the public schools. This was enacted into a law and approved by the Governor, March 6th, 1854. Hon. Jesse Miller died Aug. 20th, 1850, in the 51st year of his age. He was a self-made man, in the educational acceptation of the term, having had none other than common-school advantages for an education. He was a man of indomitable will, and supplied the lack of all else by superior energy and industry.

The greatest hindrances to the cause of free education in Perry county, are short annual terms, an average of 4.3 months in 1871; low salaries, $50 per month being the highest for the same year, and, as a result, inexperienced teachers. Many districts exhibit a commendable interest in the work that have not yet made any considerable advance. The graded school is slowly but surely working its way into the favor of the people, and we look confidently forward to the time when every district will have its own high school, presided over by a principal who shall be the superintendent of that district by virtue of his office.

The general intelligence of Perry county is equal to that of any of the adjoining counties; yet we recognize the fact that much remains to be done. We have built school-houses, in many instances, on grounds unsuitable, more to literally fulfill the requirements of the law, than to well subserve the purposes intended; but better sentiments begin to pervade the public mind as the necessity for an education becomes greater. Outline maps and magnetic globes are found in the majority of the schools, and there is not one district, in the whole county, in which the school-houses are not supplied with blackboards of some kind.

In 1834 there were twelve districts reported in the county, six accepting and three non-accepting.

In 1836 Perry county was third in order of favor toward the free school system.

In 1837 Greenwood and Millerstown had an average school term of five months.

SECTION IV.—PHYSICAL.

CHAPTER I.

THE GEOLOGY.

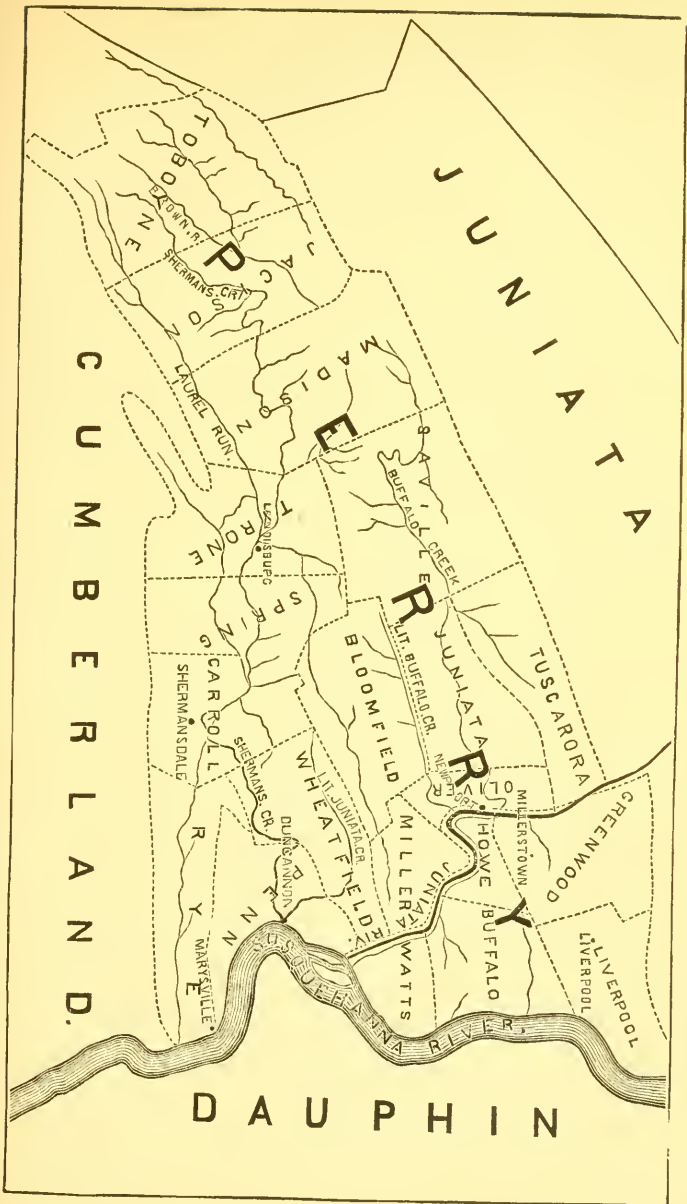

Perry county lies wholly within the central formation of the State, and hence from the fact that no coal, except an outcrop of less than six inches in thickness in the end of Berry's Mountain, has yet been discovered, it is fair to infer, that it is of a lower and older formation, most probably the next or Silurian, than the Carboniferous.

Perry county is bounded on the south by the Kittatinny Mountain—the Tuscarora forms the north-western boundary, joining the Kittatinny by spurs. The Susquehanna river completes the boundary on the east. Thus it will be seen, that these three prominent and well-defined boundaries enclose the county, in a shape which requires but little imagination to convert into a triangle.

The geological character of this county must be studied in connection with the rock formations east of the Susquehanna river.

Beginning at the base of the Kittatinny Mountain at Marysville, we have an inferior series composed chiefly of olive colored slate, streaked with strata of gray sandstone. This formation ranges westward; widening east of Landisburg, it sweeps around on the north of the red shale and sandstone of Sherman's creek; it returns through south-western Saville, thence along Buffalo creek, across the Juniata, extending through Howe and Buffalo townships, reaches the Susquehanna above Halifax. Here it unites with the corresponding formation of the northern basin which extends nearly due westward on the north of Bloomfield, to a point on the head of Sherman's creek, near the village of Blain, whence its northern division passes north-eastward through northern Madison, Sandy Hill, Saville, thence south-east through Buckwheat and Sugar Run valleys, crosses the Juniata below Millerstown, reaches the Susquehanna through Greenwood and Liverpool townships, above Liverpool. The outer limits of this series are marked by ranges of hills or ridges containing the coarse fossiliferous sandstone, below which, in geologic position is the accompanying limestone.

The red shale which underlies the conglomerate floor of the coal fields extends across the Susquehanna above Dauphin, forming a cove in Penn township, formerly known as Allen's Cove. The red shale of Lykens Valley extends across the river, and is enclosed by Buffalo and Berry's mountains in a triangular-shaped valley, known as Hunter's Valley.

The same formation continued on both sides of Buffalo Mountain crosses the river, and is extended between the slate and limestone in the western part of the county. The sandstone which is next in order below the red shale, encloses it in Cove Mountain, which is the union of Peter's and Second Mountain. The same sandstone formation is found on the north side of Buffalo, which is an extension of Mohontongo Mountain joining with Berry's Mountain.

These formations, the fossiliferous sandstone with the underlying limestone, extend on the north of the Kittatinny as far as Wagner's Gap, where they pass northward near Landisburg, and then north-eastward by Bloomfield, across the Juniata, on the east of the river; they then extend south-eastward for a short distance, until they crop to the surface in Howe township, just below John Patterson's, along the river, where lime-kilns have been in operation for a number of years. The northern division of the limestone formation passes westward nearly to Germantown, and then folds back to the north-east, along the base of the Conococheage and Tuscarora mountains, crosses the Juniata near Millerstown, and extends through Pfoutz's Valley to the Susquehanna.

There are red and variegated shales lying between the limestone and the sandstone, of both the Kittatinny and Tuscarora ranges of these series in Perry county.

The following is Mr. Trego's estimate of the quantity of the different kinds of soil :

Limestone,.....	18,460	Acres.
Slate,.....	104,780	"
Gravel,	74,710	"
Sand,	5,040	"
Mountain and Stony,.....	68,240	"
Iron Ore,	40	"
Total,.....	271,270	"

This calculation is probably based upon an area less than that found by G. M. Hopkins, the civil engineer, who made the surveys and measurements for the excellent and accurate county map of Perry, Juniata and Mifflin, published in 1863, by Smith, Gallup and Hewitt.

Perry county is 47 miles long and $14\frac{1}{2}$ miles of an average width. Its area is 550 square miles, leaving 80,730 acres not assigned to any kind of soil in Mr. Tergo's calculation.

Hematite and Fossil iron ores are now extensively mined in Michael's ridge, Greenwood township, Tuscarora Mountains, Tuscarora township, Limestone ridge in Oliver and Miller townships, and Halfall Hills in Buffalo and Watts townships. These are all newly opened mines, and give promise of contributing largely for many years to the chief mineral wealth of the county. The hematite or specular ore found in these mines has a red, earthy appearance. It is as hard as feldspar—yielding usually about 70 per cent. of iron. It is not attracted by the magnet, and hence has no influence upon the magnetic needle, unless heated by artificial means.

Hematite iron ore is generally accompanied by rocks of the metamorphic formation. Limonite, or fossil iron ore, as it is locally known among our miners, is a hydrous sesquioxyd, containing 85.6 of the ore to 14.4 parts of water. It occurs along with alumina, magnesia, or lime, in many varieties. It varies in color from a black or brown to yellowish-brown, and earthy. The color of the powder distinguishes this species, as well as the magnetic, from hematite.

The only mineral or mineral products of the county are iron ore, already described, and limestone, though at various times flattering prospects have been entertained of both coal and petroleum.

The Perry Forester for May, 1827, contains the following: "A very extensive bed of stone coal has been discovered near the mouth of Sherman's creek, in this county, on land belonging to Stephen Duncan, Esq., of Philadelphia. This discovery is another proof that what our county lacks in quantity of fertile land, nature has supplied in the inexhaustible wealth contained within the bowels of our mountains."

In October, 1865, two oil companies were organized in Perry county. The one known as Collier Oil Company held a lease-hold in Saville township, on the head-waters of Buffalo creek, consisting of one hundred and thirty acres, the lease running for ninety years upon a royalty of one-tenth, to be rendered in vessels furnished by the lessor. It is hardly necessary to tell any of the present generation that this enterprise failed, notwithstanding it was encouraged by public-spirited men, who believed that there were unmistakable surface indications of a rich basin of petroleum.

This company was organized with a capital stock of $100,000, divided into 20,000 shares. The par value of each share was $5, and the subscription price one dollar. The working capital was $10,000.

About two weeks earlier was started the pioneer oil company, known as Snyder Spring Oil Company. It was organized with a capital of $50,000, making $1 both the par value and the subscription price per share.

This company held two leases, each for twenty-one years, one from William Snyder for seventy acres, and the other from Godfrey Burket, both living in Saville township, about eight miles from Bloomfield. This company seems to have been organized to settle the question then so violently agitating the popular mind "oil or no oil," and found as their answer no oil.

During the summer of 1871, a number of persons living in Spring and Tyrone townships, contributed to a corporation similarly organized to the oil companies for the purpose of testing the indications of coal within their limits. The operations were carried on by boring and it was reported through the columns of the county papers that Mr. George Sheibley, who superintended the work on the farm of Mr. Freeman, north of Loysville, passed through a 13-inch vein of coal.

The indications in Spring township, near Oak Grove, have attracted public attention for a number of years, and seem to us the strongest west of the Juniata.

The limestone found in Perry county is mostly of the Massive variety, and contains about 56 parts of quick lime to 44 of carbonic acid, when burnt.

Dana says: "Most limestone has been formed from shells and corals ground up by the action of the sea and afterward consolidated."

The first lime burnt in Toboyne township, was near Mountain run by Henry Mumper, for a stone wall, and the last of it was hauled out about fourteen years ago for fertilizing farm-land.

As early as 1830, lime was used as a fertilizer in Raccoon and Pfoutz's valleys. Then the stone was hauled and burnt in kilns with wood on the land-owner's farm. This was done doubtless to use the wood which was then superabundant and almost without a market. Now the scarcity of wood and the use of anthracite coal has inaugurated a new system, which is to burn the lime in stacks or kilns near the quarry, and then haul it. A few of these old lime-kilns in ruins in valleys where there is no limestone may still be seen.

As places of wild and scientific grandeur to the tourist, student and scientist, we recommend Limestone Ridge, between Newport and Bloomfield; Forge Hill, on the Pfoutz's Valley side; Conecocheague Mountains, along the main road to Horse Valley, north of New Germantown, and the "Path" from Horse Valley to Fairview tannery; the paths from Little Illinois to Sheaffer's Valley, and that from Sheaffer's to Kennedy's Valley; the gaps through which roads pass from Cumberland to Perry county, and the arrangement of the hills at and surrounding Duncannon. At the last mentioned place, three distinct landscapes with far-reaching perspectives, may be viewed and enjoyed. Here there seems to be the strongest indications of a glacial epoch in its formation. When the mighty glacier cut out among the mountains a course for the broad Susquehanna, piling its lateral moraines into our Tuscarora, Conococheague and Kittatinny mountains, then we imagine the supposed lake that covered the chaotic location of Duncannon to have had its existence. There are many indications pointing to the glacial epoch of the Susquehanna, but exactly in calendar years when it existed, how fast the glacier advanced in opening this greatest river channel to the ocean, we leave to be determined in the great future by the careful and persistent study of scientific men, whose time can be given exclusively to this work, assured that their interpretation of geological facts, if true, will be the truth.

CHAPTER II.

THE FLORA.

Our earliest spring flower is the Liver Leaf (Hepatica triloba), a plant found along the border of hilly woods. It is readily distinguished by its blue flower being surrounded by three small leaves, which are three-lobed and quite woolly on the under side when young, and purplish when old.

Much more abundant on the hill-sides and near it will be found the Rue Anemone (Thalictrum anemonides), distinguished by its tuberous roots, its delicate foliage, and pure white or purplish star-like flowers. It is distinguished from the Wood Anemone (Anemone nemorosa), which is found growing in damp places, by having a single flower on the stem.

Two species of Buttercups will next attract attention in the meadows. This genus may readily be distinguished by the minute scale or leaf at its base. The Creeping Crowfoot (Rununculus perens) may be distinguished from the Early Crowfoot (Rununculus fascicularis), in the narrower divisions of its leaves and its longer prostrate stems.

The Rose family (Rosacæ) derives its importance from the many valuable trees, shrubs and plants embraced in its genus. The apple, pear, quince, peach, nectarine, apricot, plum, prune, gage and cherry are the exotics adopted into the flora of Perry county.

The flowering shrubs of this family are the Rose, queen of flowers, which, with its many varieties, may be found in our gardens or hibernating in the sunlight of our south side windows.

The Sweet Brier (Rosa rubiginosa), with its numerous prickles and sweet smell, seen along unfrequented byways, or roadsides, is a straggler from Europe.

Another very pretty plant of the rose family is the Indian Physic (Gillenia trifoliata), is commonly found growing in thickets and borders of woods. It grows about eighteen inches high, has a reclining stem, with leaflets in threes. The narrow pinkish-white petals, or flower leaves, are about one inch long.

The Agrimona of the Eupatoria tribe, has small yellow flowers, in a long spike, and leaves composed of five or seven leaflets, with smaller ones between.

The Avens genalum, which has three-lobed stem leaves and small white flowers, may be better distinguished by the round green head of fruit which has attached to its seed vessels the bristle jointed styles, the upper joints of which fall off, leaving the under piece, which is hooked, ready to cling to the fleeces of animals, and thus scatter the seed.

The former two of the three last mentioned species are esteemed for their medicinal properties. All are frequently found growing in shaded meadows where the grass is thin.

The common Cinque-foil (Potentilla canadensis) or five-finger, is found in neglected fields and on hill-sides in abundance. A kindred species, but a coarser plant, with but three leaflets, is often found in gardens and in fields. These two species are the only ones of the genus yet discovered.

The Wild Strawberry (Fragaria virginiana) is the only member of the family rosaceæ, which is a native of both Europe and America. It is found growing in neglected fields, and produces a small and sweeter variety of fruit than the cultivated kinds. Strawberry culture is claiming more general attention than formerly, induced, no doubt, by the greater demand for this kind of fruit.

Along fence rows, in the greatest profusion, may be seen the High Blackberry (Rubus vilosus) with its stout, nearly erect stem, and the Dewberry (R. canadensis) an extensively trailing plant, with earlier, larger and better fruit.

There are two species of Raspberry, the high (Rubus occidentalis), which is a companion of the high blackberry, and the purple flowering, which is found on our hills and upland slopes. This last variety is readily distinguished by its purple flowers and undivided leaves.

To the division of the Rose family, distinguished for the apple and pear, belong two species of thorn-bush. Each has numerous leaflets and pointed branches or spines. The Scarlet Fruited Thorn (Cratægus coccinæ), a low tree with smooth leaves and a smooth stem, and scarlet fruit. The black or Pear Thorn (Crætagus tomentosa), a higher tree, whose young leaves and branches are downy, and whose fruit is dull and yellowish, with whitish spots, is found in thickets and copses. The height of the Thorn-bush is rarely more than fifteen feet.

The June Berry (Amelanchier canadensis) is a small tree, the trunk of which resembles the maple, easily recognized in early spring by its numerous showy white flowers, and by the middle of June by its small red ripe berries. The fruit of the June Berry is delicate to the taste when raw, but whenever cooked it becomes bitter and unfit for use.

The Wild Cherry (Prunus scrotina) grows to be a fine large tree, valuable both for its wood and bark; also, for its small black cherries, which are crowded along a racemed stem. This tree is valued for its medicinal properties.

The Wild Plum (Prunus americanus) is a native, and found along creek banks.

Of the Lilaceæ family, there are Garden Asparagus (Asparagus officinalis), Field Garlic, (Allium vineale), the Wild Yellow Lily (Lilium canadensis) which may be seen in our meadows. Of the Sedge family, the Bullrush (Scirpus lacustus) is common along our smaller streams, while along the creeks and rivers, down at the water's edge may be found the River Club Rush (S. fluviatilis).

The Heath family is represented in our woods by the Huckleberry (Gryllossacia) of several varieties. The Box-leaved Huckleberry (G. brachysera) is found on the Mahonoy hills, near New Bloomfield. The Blue Tangle (G. frondosa) grows in fence corners of cleared fields, and in the edges of woods, where the ground is not too dry.

The Ground Laurel (Epigæa), Creeping Winter-green (Gaultheria procumbens), with the several varieties of Laurel, the Mountain Laurel (Kalmialatifolia), and the Sheep Laurel (K. angustifolia), are the most common perennials belonging to our woods.

The Black-snake Root (Cimicifuga) belongs to the "butter-cup" family. It grows in moist ground, and is valued for medicinal purposes.

Of Columbines, the crimson and yellow (Aquilegia canadensis) growing among rocks in craggy places, is one of the prettiest of our early spring flowers.

The Barberry family is represented in the May Apple (Podophyllum peltatum), or Mandrake, in the Yellow Pond Lily or Spatter-dock (Nuphar advena) and in the Twin-leaf (Jeffersonia diphylla), which is sometimes called the Rheumatism Root. Of the Composite family, we have the dandelion, thistle, aster, golden rod, or sun-flower; being so common, we omit their scientific names.

The Arum family is represented in the Indian Turnip (Arisæna triphyllum). It is intensely acrid, as who has not tested? The swamp, or Chicago Cabbage (Symplocarpus fœtidus), belongs to the same family, and is found along creeks, or in marshy meadows. It has a medical reputation for some diseases.

The St. John's Wort family is represented in the common variety (Hypericum perforatum), which is commonly found in pasture fields, and the Daisy (Bellis perennis), which is indulged by too many farmers.

The Virginia Snake-root (Aristolochia serpentaria), is found growing in our woods. It is found on Forge Hill, and is one of the two representatives of the Birthwort family. The other is the Wild Ginger (Asarum canadensis).

The common Poke or Shoke (Shytolacca deondra) grows in moist grounds. In early spring it is sometimes eaten as a substitute for asparagus.

There are also represented of Mints all the common varieties, the Tansies and of the Lobelia family, the Indian Tobacco (Lobelia inflata).

"A very common shrub along fence rows, is the Elder (Sambucus canadensis), distinguished by its large flat-topped bunches of small white flowers." The red-berried Elder (Sambucus pubens), with long bunches of flowers and red berries, is rarely found except on the hill slopes.

Growing on banks often near a stream are found the Arrow-wood (Viburnum dentatum) and the Dock Mackie (V. acerifolium); the former has a single-toothed leaf to a leaf stem, while the leaf of the latter is three-lobed similar to that of the maple.

The Button-bush (Cephalanthus occidentalis), a shrub common in low meadows, may be readily recognized by its white flowers being collected in a perfect ball of about an inch in diameter.

We have of the Mallows family, the Crisp M. (Malva crispa), and the Wood Mallows (M. sylvestris). Of Sorrels, there are Wood Sorrel (Oxalis ace), and Violet Wood Sorrel (Oxalis violacæ).

The Smooth Sumac, so common on our hill-sides as to form quite an article of commerce a few years ago, is technically known as Rhus glabra. Its leaves and branches are smooth, which sufficiently distinguish it from the far less common Dwarf Sumac (Rhus copollino), which has downy branches and winged leaf stalks. Here, too, we place the Poison Joy (Rhus toxicodendron), a shrub or vine with but three irregular leaflets on a leafstalk too common along our fences, for it is so poisonous that even the effluvium is deleterious to some individuals. The Fragrant Sumac (Rhus aromatica), flowers in April, and is so different from the others as not to be readily recognized.

The Red-root or New Jersey Tea (Ceanothus americanus) is a small bushy shrub about two feet high, whose leaves were used for tea by our ancestors of Revolutionary memory. Its flowers are white, with white stems in thick oblong clusters at the end of the branches.

Of the Laurel family already spoken of, there remain yet the Red Bay (Qersea carolinensis) which is hoary when young, with a fine down. It bears a few dark-blue berries on a a red stalk. The Sassafras (Laurus sassafras) grows in rich wood soil. It is common, and much prized for its bark and wood. The roots are much sought in the spring of the year for tea. The Spice-bush (Benzoin odoriferum) is found in damp woods. Its scientific name was given it from the supposed resemblance of its aroma to benzine.

The Vine family is represented in the Grape (Vi- tis) of which the Northern Fox Grape (Vitis labrusca) is the largest. It is said that this grape improved by cultivation gave rise to the Isabella grape.

The Summer Grape (V. æstivalis) is a small grape rarer than the fox-grape in most localities. It ripens in October.

The Frost or Winter Grape, locally known as the Chicken Grape (V. cordifolia) is very plenty on most of hill slopes. They are very acerb until frosted, after which they ripen and are reckoned pleasant.

Of the forest trees that clothe our hills and form the groves in our valleys are the Pine family, of which there are a number of varieties, such as Yellow (Pinus mitis), Pitch, (P. rigida), Loblolly (P. laeda), found in old fields, White, (P. strobus). The Fir of the last named family is represented in the Hemlock Spruce (Abies canadensis), also in the Norway Spruce (A. excelsa), which is planted for ornament, and found to thrive much better than our indigenous species. The Arbor Vitæ (Thrya occidentalis) is much valued for its perennial green for cemeteries, where it is most frequently found.

The Oak family is represented in the White Oak (Quercus alba), in the Chestnut Oak (Q. montana), in the Black Oak (Q. tinctorum), in the Pin Oak (Q. palustris), also in the Chestnut (Castanea vesca), which stands frequently the sole surviving, the lone Indian of the forest trees on the cleared land, in the Beech (Fagus ferruginea), in the Hazel-nut (Corylus americana), in the Water Beech, or Ironwood (Carpinus americana), and in the American Hop-Horn-beam, (Ostrya virginiana). This last representative of the Oak family grows in slender trees with very hard wood, brownish, finely furrowed bark and is locally known as the hop tree.

The Walnut family has but two representatives of the same name, the Butternut (Juglans cinerea), and the Black Walnut, (J. nigra). The former may be found on the hill-sides, delighting to grow among rocks and stones where few other trees of equal size can subsist, while the latter, of more use for its wood, is found on the fertile soil of the valleys.

This family is further represented in the Shag-bark Hickory (Carya alba), in the Small Fruited Hickory (C. microcarpa), and the Pig-nut or Brown Hickory (C. amara). The Shag-bark Hickory is much prized for its fruit and wood, while the last variety was, more formerly than now, sought after by the makers of splint brooms.

The Dogwood family, though not of the most numerous kind of our forests and groves, is still an important member of our flora.

The Bunchberry Dogwood (Cornus canadensis) the Flowering Dogwood (C. florida) and the Red Osier (C. stolonifera), may be distinguished from all the forest trees, the first by its red berries, said, if plentiful, to foretell "a hard winter," the second variety by their large showy white flowers which tell people "it's time to plant corn," and the last by its beautiful branches. This variety propagates its species by prostrate or underground suckers. It is found on wet banks of streams and in thickets.

The Dogwood family is further represented in the black or sour gum (Nyssa multiflora), a middle-sized tree with branchlets very much like the beech; the wood is close-grained, and very unwedgeable. The leaves turn a bright crimson color in autumn which distinguishes the tree from other forest trees.

The Plane Tree family has a single American representative, the Buttonwood or American Sycamore (Platanus occidentalis). The Common Locust (Robinia pseudacacia) is found growing naturally in the woods. It is also planted for a shade tree along streets and public highways. Its wood is invaluable for many purposes. Its white fragrant flowers help crown the coming Junes.

The Maple family is represented by several varieties, the Striped Maple (Acer pennsylvanicum) is a small and slender tree, with light green bark striped with dark lines, bearing greenish flowers and fruit. It is sometimes called striped dogwood.

The Mountain Maple (Acer spicatum), the Red or Swamp Maple and Sugar Maple (A. nigrum and saccharinum) grow naturally everywhere. They are also cultivated for ornamental and shade trees.

The White or Silver Maple (Acer dasycarpum) is a fine ornamental tree.

The False Sycamore and Norway Maple are European species.

The custom of making maple sugar never became popular in Perry county. Occasionally small quantities have been manufactured.

We next come to the Willow family, most graceful in the symmetry and waving branches of all the tree kind.

The first variety that claims notice is the Weeping Willow (Salix babylonia), which is held in great esteem for ornamental purposes; growing on the grave of the departed, its drooping branches have doubtless given it the name.

The Shining Willow (S. lucida) may be found along streams. It grows to be a bushy tree of 12 or 15 feet in height, and is the resort of innumerable bees during its season of inflorescence. The Black Willow (S. nigra) may be found growing along creeks and larger streams where the water is stagnated or flows very slowly. This species attains a height of 15 to 25 feet.

The Willow family is also represented in the several varieties of the Aspen or Poplar. The latter name is retained from the fact that these trees were anciently used to adorn the public walks.

The Quaking Asp or American Aspen (Populus tremuloides) is occasionally found in the woods. The tree sometimes attains the height of fifty feet, but is more frequently found not to exceed thirty feet. The leaf-stalk is long and compressed at the sides, which accounts for its constant agitation.

The Large-toothed Aspen (P. grandidentata) attains a greater height, and may be distinguished by its smoothish gray bark.

The White Poplar (P. alba) was originally from the Old World, but its capacity to spread by the roots has propagated its species with such rapidity that it has been claimed as indigenous to America.

The Lombardy Poplar (P. dilatata) has fallen into disfavor with our people as an ornamental tree, and the worms have completed its destruction, Not one is known to be now growing in the whole county. The tall central shaft of its pyramidal form is occasionally relieved by a dead gnarled branch, which is seen without bark or leaf, bearing testimony of its extinct species. It is a European species.

The Elm family is represented in the Slippery or Red Elm (Ulmaceae fulva), which is a small or medium sized tree, frequently found on hill summits. It has a rough reddish wood, and a very mucilaginous inner bark which is valuable as a medicine. The American or White Elm (U. Americana) is a large well-known ornamental tree with spreading branches, and drooping branchlets. This species is found growing in moist grounds along streams of water.

The Mulberry is classed with the Nettle family which will not serve to increase it in our estimation. The Red Mulberry (Morus rubra), a tree of low stature, attains to considerable thickness of trunk. Its sweetish black berry-like fruit ripens in July. The Italian Mulberry (Morus multicaulis) was introduced from Europe for feeding silk worms. It was sadly remembered by many as the source of their great loss. The Paper Mulberry (Broussonetia papyrifera) is a native of Japan, and is found growing in our county as a shade tree.

The Olive family is represented in the several varieties of the Ash, of which the White Ash (Fraxinus americana) grows to a large forest tree, with gray furrowed bark. Its wood is used in the manufacture of many kinds of implements. The Black or Water Ash (F. sambucifolia) and the Green Ash (F. viridis) are met with occasionally.

Of the Ebony family there is but a single representative, the Common Persimmon (Diospyros virginiana), which is a small tree with thickish leaves. It produces plumb-like fruit, yellow when ripe. This fruit is so exceedingly astringent or contracting in its effect when green that, "to draw your mouth up like a green persimmon" is a common expression; but it is sweet and edible after exposure to the frost.

Conscious that we have not enumerated the entire flora of Perry county, we have intentionally omitted the ferns, mosses and lichens, not that we deem them too unimportant, but simply from the fact that we had not the time to make a sufficiently careful investigation and analysis of them, this chapter is submitted to the general reader in the hope that thereby his attention may be enlisted to further investigate the subject. Remember that every plant here spoken of can be found within the limits of your own county. You will have read of the example of many others in the preceding pages of this book; go forth like them, assured that that there is a work that you can do. Here is a whole county of nearly five hundred and fifty square miles, the plants of which very little is known. Who will possess the largest "herbarium" of our students of botany.

CHAPTER III.

NATURAL HISTORY.

At present there is not a scientific association in the county, therefore the following sketch of a subject, containing subjects each of which would be sufficient for years of individual investigation, must prove a mere outline; but as such it is given, in the hope that it will induce others to push investigations further and supply what is necessarily omitted.

CLASS MAMMALIA.—Although the deer, bear and wolf have been found in Perry county within a period of less than five years, yet it is evident that all but the former, which is found in his native wildness among the thick woods of the Conococheague Hills, have been driven here by fire or the pursuit of hunters. In 1871, an old bear and cub crossed through Pfoutz's Valley, over the Forge Hill into Wildcat Valley, where some hunters frightened them to return, which they did, and were killed in Juniata county. They had been driven from Shade Mountain by the fires which were burning over them at that season of the year. A pack of wolves were said to infest the woody parts of Buffalo Mountain in the year 1868. from whence they came forth, in the night time to plunder sheepfolds, and make the night hideous with their howls.

The Wildcat or Canada Lynx is occasionally killed in the county. One was so crippled near Millerstown a few years ago, by a passing train, that it was afterward killed. Mr Joshua North is said to have been attacked by one in daylight in Wildcat Valley, many years ago, which he killed with stones, hence the origin of the name of the valley.

Mr. Magee settled at an early day among the hills of Toboyne township. Hearing a screaming one dark night near his cabin, he stepped out of the door with an ax, and killed a panther that was just ready to pounce upon him.

Of the ORDER CARNIVORA and Family Chiroptera there are the Hoary Bat (Vespertilio pruinosa) and the Brown Bat (V. carolinensis). Of the Family Insectivora, the Mole (Scalops canadensis) is the only representative. Of the Family Carnivora, the Raccoon (Procyon lotor), which has given its name to a beautiful valley of Tuscarora township, the Mink (Mustela lutreola), the Weasel (M. vulgaris), the Skunk (Mephitis americana), the Otter (Lutra brasiliensis) is occasionally caught in the Juniata, the Red Fox (Canis fulvus), the Gray Fox (C. cinereo-argentatus), and the Wildcat (Felis canadensis) are the representatives.

The Opossum (Didelphis virginiana) is the sole representative of the Marsupialia Family.

ORDER RODENTIA, Family Claviculata. — The

Musk Rat (Fiber zebethicus), Meadow Mouse (Mus musculus), Field Mouse (M. agrarius), Common Mouse (M. musculus), Ground Hog or Woodchuck (Arctomys monax), Fox Squirrel (Sciurus rubricandatus), Gray Squirrel (S. carolinensis), Red Squirrel, locally known as Pine Squirrel (Pteromys volucella.)

Family Inclaviculata.—The common Hare, which is known everywhere as the Rabbit, authority to the contrary notwithstanding (Lepus americanus), is very abundant.

We next come to an enumeration of the birds that are found in the county, of which, for want of proper data, we cannot give a complete list.

The name of this science is Ornithology.

ORDER I. RAPTORES—Family Vulturidæ—THE VULTURES.

These birds feed on offal and carrion. The Turkey Vulture or Turkey Buzzard (Cathartes aura) is the only one of the four species known in North America that frequents the county.

Family Falconidæ—THE FALCONS.

This family are predatory in their habits. They capture their prey, which is small quadrupeds, birds, fish and reptiles. There are forty-one species in North America, of which Perry county has the Sparrow Hawk (Falco hypotriorchis), which feeds on small birds, mice and reptiles, the Sharp-shinned Hawk (Accipiter fuscus), the Goshawk (Astur atricapillus).

The American Golden, Washington or Gray Eagle (Aquila canadensis), the imperial bird of America, is occasionally met with in the county, though he is becoming rare everywhere. He never feeds upon the fruits of other birds' toil, but "relies upon his own power and energy to strike down for himself the quarry, and devours it while the flesh still palpitates." The White-Headed, or Bald Eagle (Helicæetus leucocephalus) is found near fish baskets, where, less dainty than his gray namesake, he lives on whatever will satiate his voracious appetite. The Fish Hawk or Osprey (Pandion carolinensis), feeds upon fish, and is found along our creeks and rivers.

Family Strigidae—THE OWLS.

This family like the former one is predatory in its habits and feeds upon quadrupeds, birds and reptiles. There are seventeen known species in North America, of which Perry county has the common or Barn Owl (Strix flammea), the Great Horned Owl (Bubo virginianus) which feeds on poultry and game of all kinds. It is very destructive. The Screech Owl (Scops asio) is common; feeds upon mice, small birds and insects.

ORDER II.—SCANSORES (climbers). Family Ficedadæ

—THE WOODPECKERS.

This family is here represented in the Hairy Woodpecker (Picus vilosus), which is common summer and winter; the Yellow-bellied Woodpecker (Phirapicus varius), the Red-headed Woodpecker (Melanerpes erythrocephalus), which breeds in the county and was formerly believed to pull up corn, and the Flicker (Colaptes auratus).

ORDER III.—INCESSORES. Family Trochilidæ—

THE HUMMING-BIRDS.

These birds feed upon nectar and minute insects. There are seven known species in North America of which the common Humming-bird (Trochilus colubris) is the only one of which we have positive knowledge.

Family Cypselidæ—THE SWIFTS.

This family feeds upon insects captured on the wing. There are four known species in North America, of which the Chimney Swallows (Chaeturus pelagica) are very abundant and owing to their protection seem to be increasing every year.

Family Caprimulgidæ—THE GOATSUCKERS.

There are two species of this family in the county, and but four in North America. They feed on winged insects. The Whippoorwill (Antrostomus vociferus) is a nocturnal bird named from its repeated night-song, and the Night Hawk (Chordeiles popetue) by many supposed to be identical, are the only representatives.

Family Alcedinidæ—THE KINGFISHERS.

This family has four members in North America and one in the county, the Belted Kingfisher (Ceryle alcyon) is found along the Juniata and tributaries, where it breeds.

Family Colapteridæ—FLY CATCHERS.

There are twenty-eight species known in North America of which the King Bird (Tyrannus carolinensis), is very common; the Pewee Fly Catcher (Say- ornis fuscus) is one of our first birds of spring, and remains until late in the autumn.

Family Turdidæ—THE THRUSHES.

Number of species in North America, seventeen, of which the Wood Thrush (Turdus mustelinus), Common Robin, (Planesticus migratorius), seemingly on the increase in numbers within a few years, Blue-bird (Sialia sialis), the first migratory bird to appear in the Spring ; Ruby Crown Wren (Regulus calendula), and Golden Crested Wren (R. satrapa), are all known in the county.

Family Silvicolidæ—THE WARBLERS.

This family feed upon insects, and number sixty species, of which the Blue Warbler (Dendroica virens) migratory ; Yellow Warbler or Summer Yellow Bird (D. æstiva), is common ; Chestnut-sided Warbler (D. pennsylvanica), Black and Yellow Warbler (D. maculosa), migratory and frequent spring and autumn. Red Start (Sitophaga ruticilla), Summer Red Bird (Tanagra æstivæ), Water Thrush (Seiurus noveboracensis), is frequent during the bird-summer the Blue Yellow-backed Warbler (Parula americana) and the Tit Lark (Anthus ludoviciana), which is seen in the autumn and winter. These birds are nearly all common, and breed in the county

Family Hirundinidæ—THE SWALLOWS.

The birds of this family feed exclusively upon insects, which are captured on the wing. The number of species known in North America is eight, of which the county has the Barn Swallow (Hirundo horreorum), the Cliff Swallow (H. lunifrons), the White-bellied Swallow (H. bicolor), and the Purple Martin (Progne purpureæ) are quite domestic wherever accommodations are provided for them. They breed in boxes provided for them at Newport R. R. station, and seem as well contented as if they were in the wildest mountain cliff.

• Family Bombycillidæ—THE CEDAR BIRDS.

This family has but two known species in North America of which the Cedar Bird (Ampelis cedrorum) is commonly met with in the county.

Family Liotrichidæ

has twenty-two known species of which the Mocking Bird (Mimus polyglottus), Red-winged Blackbird (Agelaius phæniceus), Meadow Lark (Sturnella magna), Orchard Oriole (Icterus spurius), Baltimore Oriole, or Hanging Bird (I. baltimore), Rusty Blackbird (Scolecophagus), and the Crow Blackbird (Quiscalus versicolor), which flock together in hundreds near the season of migration, belong to Perry county.

Family Corvidæ—THE CROWS.

The number of known species is twenty-two in North America, of which there are four in the county.

The American Raven (Corvus carnivorus) is said to exist as a single household among the Pisgah Hills of Carroll township. The Crows (Corvus americanus) are plenty, but are never seen in companies as in Lancaster county, except near the season of migration of other birds, when they are said to hold "camp-meetings," probably to get chestnuts, of which they are very fond. The Fish Crow (D. ossifragus) is common along the rivers. The Jay Bird (Cyanurus cristatus) is a resident of the county.

ORDER IV.—RASORES—Family Columbidae—

THE PIGEONS.

This family has eleven known representatives in North America, of which but two are certainly known to ever have been found in the county. The Wild Pigeon (Ectopistes migratoria) is a visitant spring and autumn. The Turtle Dove (Zenaidura carolinensis) is frequent, and breeds in the county.

Family Thasianidae—THE TURKEYS.

The Wild Turkey (Melcagris americana) is still found in large flocks on the Forge, Tuscarora and Conococheague hills. They breed in the county.

Family Petraonidae—THE GROUSE.

The Grouse family has twelve species in North America, and one in the county. The Ruffed Grouse (Bonasa umbellus) is known in many localities as the Pheasant. It is a very shy bird, and in consequence the number is not much diminished by the shooting of amateur sportsmen.

Family Perdiciæ—THE PARTRIDGES.

There are seven known species in North America, of which Perry county has a single representative, the Partridge or "Bob White" (Ortyx virginianus).

ORDER V.—GRALLATORES—Family Ardeidae.

There are thirteen species known in North America of this family, of which the Great Blue Heron (Ardea herodias) is found along the Susquehanna, and occasionally seen near Millerstown dam, in the Juniata, and the Fly-up-the-creek (Butorides virescens), are the only ones that we could learn certainly ever visited the county.

Family Charodridæ—THE PLOVERS.

This family has eight species in North America, and one in the county, the Kill-deer Plover (Ægialitis vociferus), which is frequently heard repeating its noted "kill-deer" as it soars on moonlight nights.

Family Scolopacidæ—THE SNIPES.

There are thirty-nine species in North America, and in the county the American Woodcock (Philohela minor), Wilson's Snipe (Gallinago wilsonii), which is seen in March and October, and Yellow Shanks (Gambetta melanoluca).

ORDER VI.—NATATOIRES—Family Anatidæ.

There are fifty-four known species in North America. Those that belong to the county are the Black Duck (Anas obscura), the Summer Duck (Aix sponsa), the Black Head (Fulix marila), Ring-necked Duck (Fulix callaris), the Canvas-back Duck (Athya valisneria), Spirit Duck or Butterall (Bucephala albeola) Long-tailed Duck (Harelda glacialis), abundant in autumn, and Fisher Duck (Mergus americanus).

Family Colymbidæ.

There are twelve known species in North America, of which the Loon (Colymbus torquatus) is common, spring and autumn.

Reptilia—REPTILES.

All the reptiles of the county may be included under two families.

ORDER I. —Chelonia —TURTLES.

The Land Tortoise or Box Turtle (Testudo clausa) is frequently found; the Large River Terrapin (Ptychemys) is esteemed next in excellence to the Snapping Turtle (Chelydra serpentina) which is found in all our streams.

ORDER SAURIA—LIZARDS.

Fence Lizards (Tropidolepus undulatus) and the Five-striped Lizard (Scicus fasciatus) are the only known species within our borders.

ORDER OPHIDEA—SERPENTS—Family Rotalidæ.

The Rattle-snake (Crotalus horridus); venomous and unfrequently met with on mountain ridges. The Copperhead (Trionocephalus contortrix) is venemous, and seems to have been more than usually plenty this summer, 1872.

Family Columberidæ.

Black-snake—the Racer (Bascanon constrictor) not venomous. The Common Black-snake (Scotophis allighaniensis) is neither so slender nor so fleet as the Racer. It frequently gets to be of great size.

Two species of Water-snakes (Nerodia sipedon) and (N. fasciata) are harmless.

The Common and Swift Garter-snake (Entainia sirtalis) and (E. sauretia) are found near marshes where tadpoles live, upon which they feed.

The Common House-snake (Ophibolus eximeus) is commonly known as the "Adder."

The Blowing Viper (Heterodon platyrhines), though it makes a great show of fight, unlike the true viper, which is a foreign species, is said to be entirely harmless.

The Ground or Worm-snake (Celuta amæna) is rarely met with.

ORDER BATRACHIA—FROGS AND SALAMANDERS.

Family Ranidæ.

The Common Frog (Rana pipens) is distinguished from the others of his species by the common name "Bull-frog" and by dermal folds along the dorsal line. The Tree-frog (Hyla versicolor) is well known in the country as the herald of a storm. The Common Toad (Bufo americanus) useful as a destroyer of insects in gardens.

The Ichthyology is represented by the Sturgeon, Trout, Shad, Catfish (Chætodon), Eels (Apoda), Salmon, Pike, Perch and Suckers.

Sheibley, Esq., as editor. It is devoted to literature, politics, local news, agriculture and advertising. Mr. Sheibley has become proprietor and greatly increased his facilities for job printing. The subscription price of the Advocate is $2 per annum in advance.

Advertisement.—"For sale a healthy stout mulatto man, aged about 22 years. To be sold as the property of Rev. John Linn, deceased."—Perry Forester, 1826.

A Remarkable Room.—There is a room in the house now occupied by Francis Gibson, Esq., Spring township, Perry county, Penna., in which occurred the births of John Banister Gibson, Chief Justice Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, George Gibson, Commissary of the United States, John Bernheisel, the Mormon, Hon. John Bigler, Governor of California from 1852 to 1855, who died at Sacramento, California, on the 27th of August, 1872, and Hon. William Bigler, Governor of Pennsylvania from 1852 to 1855, still living in Clearfield, Clearfield county, Penna.

Banks of Deposit.—"Perry County, Sponsler, Junkin & Co.," was organized on the 19th of September, 1866, by electing William A. Sponsler, President, and William Willis, Cashier. "Newport" was organized on the 12th of December, 1866, with Perry Kremer, President, Isaac Wright, Cashier, and Charles A. Wright, Teller, and re-organized, March 23, 1867, with John Wright as President, and Isaac Wright, Cashier. A new article of confederation caused a re-organization, Jan. 2, 1872, when Thomas H. Milligan was elected President, Isaac Wright, Cashier, and Joseph M. Wright, Teller. "Liverpool Bank" was organized in July, 1871, with M. B. Holman, President, and J. C. Weirick, Cashier.

Burkholder, Hon. A. K., was born in Juniata township, Perry county, Pennsylvania, and was educated at Markelville Academy. He read law in the office of B. M'Intire, Esq., Bloomfield. After being admitted to the Bar he removed to Ohio, from which place he went into the army as a captain of volunteers. After his term of enlistment expired he returned home, and soon afterward removed to Missouri, where he is now (Aug. 1, 1872) serving as a president judge.

Buckwheat in 1826.—Solomon Bower, of To-boyne township, raised a stalk which had 3,012 sound grains on it.

Brady, Rev. Joseph, for many years a zealous minister of the gospel for several Presbyterian churches in the eastern part of the county, died on Tuesday evening, April 24th, 1821.

Bloomfield Times, published every Tuesday morning by Frank Mortimer & Co., is a five-column, 12x19, eight-paged weekly. It was first issued in January, 1868. Subscription price is $1.25 per year in advance. The Times is the only paper in the county published on a steam-power press.

Berkstresser, Henry, member of the House from Lawrence Co., O., was born at Liverpool, Perry Co., Pennsylvania, January 19, 1831, and grew to manhood near New Bloomfield. He removed to Ohio in the spring of 1853, settling in Richland county, but at the expiration of two years he removed to Newark, Licking county. He subsequently joined the Ohio Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and was appointed to Patriot circuit, October 1, 1860.

On the breaking out of the rebellion he entered the Union army, and was commissioned a 1st lieutenant in the 18th Ohio volunteers, October, 1861. He returned to the work of the ministry in the fall of 1862.

He was elected to the General Assembly of Ohio in the fall of 1871, and served as chairman of the Committee on Temperance.

Beaver, Gen. James A., at present a practitioner at the Center county bar, Bellefonte, Pa., was born in Millerstown, Perry county. He served his country as colonel of 148th regiment, infantry, from September 8th, 1862, till December 22, 1864, when he was honorably discharged on account of a wound which resulted in the loss of a leg. He was appointed brevet brigadier general.

Clark's Ferry was called by the Indians Queenaskawakee. This ferry was once a great fording place. A little above it, at the White Rock, on the river side, John Harris had, in 1733, a house which was complained of by the Indians.—Watson's Annals.

Cochran, Rev. Wm. P., D. D., was born in Greenwood township, Perry county, in 1803. He graduated at Princeton College in his twenty-second year. In 1825 he went to Missouri as a Home Missionary. He finally became settled as the owner of a plantation and pastor of a Presbyterian church in Marion county, Missouri, where he remained until the breaking out of the rebellion, when he received a call from the Presbyterian churches of Millerstown, Newport and Ickesburg (Buffalo church), which he accepted, and removed his family to Millerstown. He continued to discharge the duties of pastor over these congregations until the spring of 1868, when he resigned and returned to his old home in Missouri.

Duncan's Island.—The Swedish family of Huling came originally from Marcus Hook, and settled the fine island now called Duncan's. In the year 1755, Mrs. Huling, with her two children, all on one horse, forded the river when it was unusually high, and made their escape from the Indians to Fort Hunter, afterward known as McAllister's Place. A Mrs. Berryhill got safe to the same place, but her husband was killed and scalped. At the angle of the canal, near the large bridge, says James F. Watson, I saw the mound covered with trees from which hundreds of cart-loads of Indian bones were taken and used, with the intermixed earth, as filling material for one of the bastions of the dam. There were also among them many beads and trinkets, which were piled up as so much clay or stones to form an embankment.

Duncannon Iron Works, now one of the most extensive iron manufactories in central Pennsylvania, were started at Petersburg, Perry county, about 1830.

The first of these works was a small charcoal forge, erected by Duncan and Morgan, who failed after a few years, when the property was bought by Wm. L. Wister and C. W. Morgan, who built and put in operation the rolling mills, and soon after the nail factory—all of which were run by water-power until 1853, when steam-power was added to the finishing mills and continued to be used in them alone until 1860, when a flood washed out the dam. At this time steam-power was added to the other mills, and since then has been used throughout the works.

In 1853, the anthracite furnace was erected, with an average capacity of 7,000 tons of pig-iron per annum.

The old Montibello charcoal furnace was operated by the same firm until 1848, when it was blown out because it would no longer pay.

Fisher, Morgan & Co. sold their interest to the Duncannon Iron Company in 1859.

This company has been the successful operators of these works since that time. These works have grown by improvement and addition until there are 16 puddling and 6 heating furnaces and 54 nail machines; they use eight engines with a total power of 700 horses, employ 350 hands, and have upward of 80 tenant houses, besides a large store, offices and warerooms.

Flickinger, H. C., a graduate of Eastman College, Poughkeepsie, N. Y., and a very justly celebrated penman, is a native of Saville township, Perry county.

First Locomotive.—The first locomotive that ever crossed the Upper Mississippi is in this city, in the possession of Mr. D. X. Junkin. It was built in the year 1844, by the Hon. B. F. Junkin, of Perry county, Pennsylvania, while attending Lafayette College, at Easton, Pa., after seeing the first locomotive that ever run on the middle division of the Pennsylvania Central railroad. It was brought by his father, Judge Junkin, to this county, in the year 1854, and has all the requisites for drawing cars. It can be seen at the residence of Mr. D. X. Junkin in this city.—Muscatine (Iowa) Courier.

Gantt, Hon. Daniel, a native of Perry county was for many years a citizen of Bloomfield and a practitioner at that bar. While in Perry county, Mr. Gantt was identified with the most advanced educational movements of the times, ever ready to put his shoulder to the wheel and give his push.

Mr. Gantt left Perry county previous to the year 1860, and has been a resident of several States since, and finally, we learn from an Omaha paper of Nov. 22, 1872, has been elected to the bench of the Supreme Court of the State of Nebraska.

Greek Cross.—When the canal was making near Newport the laborers dug up a stone shaped like a Greek cross, which, when thoroughly cleansed, the transverse was seen to contain hieroglyphics plainly marked with a sharp-pointed instrument. This cross was sent to Philadelphia for the opinion of the members of the Historical Society, but never reaching its destination, is supposed to have been lost on the way.

Gibson's Rock.—About twenty rods from the old mansion house of the Gibsons was the precipitous wall of stratified conglomerate sandstone, known as Gibson's Rock. Its abrupt termination looked north toward a ravine. It towered about one hundred and ten feet above the waters of Sherman's creek, and seems to have once been a part of Pisgah Hills on the opposite side of the creek, but whether the spur from Dick's Hills which joined these parallel chains we could hardly safely determine. If it joined in this manner, then there were two coves of peculiar formations, such the echoes of which no human ear ever heard.

Gibson, Hon. John Banister, Chief Justice Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, was appointed to the Supreme Court, May 9th, 1853, thirty-five years ago. On the death of Chief Justice Tilghman, he became his successor, and presided over its deliberations more than twenty years, with honor to himself and to the country. So distinguished were his ability, learning and impartiality, that, after the adoption of the amended Constitution, in 1838, in times of the highest and bitterest party excitement, Governor Ritner, forgetting his personal and party feelings, and looking only to the qualifications necessary for that high office, reappointed him Chief Justice of this Commonwealth; an act honorable to both.

Judge Gibson lived to an advanced age; his knowledge increasing with increasing years, while his great intellect remained unimpaired. (An extract from the remarks of Thaddeus Stevens.)

We cannot forbear giving in full the eulogium of Chief Justice Black upon the occasion that called forth the foregoing from Hon. Thaddeus Stevens. We commend it as a gem worthy to be read and re-read by every student and admirer of literature :

“It is unnecessary to say that every surviving member of the Court is deeply grieved by the death of Chief Justice Gibson. In the course of nature it was not to be expected that he could live much longer, for he had attained the ripe age of seventy-six. But the blow, though not a sudden, was, nevertheless, a severe one.

“The intimate relations, personal and official, which we all bore to him, would have been sufficient to account for some emotion, even if he had been an ordinary man. But he was the Nestor of the bench, whose wisdom inspired the public mind with confidence in our decisions. By this bereavement the Court has lost what no time can repair; for we shall never look upon his like again.

"We regarded him more as a father than a brother. None of us ever saw a Supreme Court until he was in it; and to some of us his character as a great judge was familiar even in childhood. The earliest knowledge of the law we had was derived in part from his luminous expositions of it. He was a Judge of the Common Pleas before the youngest of us was born, and was a member of this Court long before the oldest was admitted to the bar. He sat here with twenty-six different associates, of whom eighteen preceded him to the grave. For nearly a quarter of a century he was Chief Justice, and when he was nominally superseded by another, as the head of the court, his great learning, venerable character, and overshadowing reputation, still made him the only Chief whom the hearts of the people would know. During the long period of his judicial labors he discussed and decided innumerable questions. His opinions are found in no less than seventy volumes of the regular reports from 2 Sergeant and Rawle to 7 Harris.

"At the time of his death he had been longer in office than any contemporary judge in the world; and in some points of character he had not his equal on the earth. Such vigor, clearness and precision of thought were never before united with the same felicity of diction. Brougham has sketched Lord Stowell justly enough as the greatest judicial writer that England could boast of, for force and beauty of style. He selects a sentence and calls on the reader to admire the remarkable elegance of its structure. I believe that Judge Gibson never wrote an opinion in his life from which a passage might not be taken, stronger, as well as more graceful in its turn of expression, than this which is selected with so much care, by a most zealous friend, from all of Lord Stowell's. His written language was a transcript of his mind. It gave the world the very form and pressure of his thoughts. It was accurate, because he knew the exact boundaries of the principles he discussed. His mental vision took in the whole outline and all the details of the case, and with a bold and steady hand he painted what he saw. He made others understand him, because he understood himself.

‘Cui lecta potenter erit res,
Nec fecundius deseret hunc, neclucidus ordo,’

“His style was rich, but he never turned out of his way for figures of speech. He never sacrificed sense to sound, or preferred ornament to substance. If he reasoned much by comparison, it was not to make his composition brilliant, but clear. He spoke in metaphors often; not because they were sought, but because they came to his mind unbidden. The same vein of happy illustration ran through his conversation and his private letters. I was most of all struck with it in a careless memorandum intended, when it was written, for no eye but his own. He never thought of display, and seemed totally unconscious that he had the power to make any. His words were always precisely adapted to the subject. He said neither more nor less than just the thing he ought. He had one thought of a great poet—that of expressing a thought in language which could never afterward be paraphrased. When a legal principle passed through his hands he sent it forth clothed in a dress which fitted it so exactly that nobody ever presumed to give it any other. Almost universally the syllabus of his opinion is a sentence from itself; and the most heedless student, in looking over Wharton's Digest, can select the cases in which Gibson delivered the judgment, as readily as he would pick out gold coins from among coppers. For this reason it is that he was the least voluminous writer of the court; the citations from him at the bar are more numerous than from all the rest put together. Yet the men who shared with him the labors and responsibilities of this tribunal (of course I am not referring to any who are now here) stood among the foremost in the country for learning and ability. To be their equal was an honor which few could attain; to excel them was a most pre-eminent distinction.

“The dignity, richness and purity of his written opinions was by no means his highest title to admiration. The movements of his mind were as strong as they were graceful. His periods not only pleased the ear, but sunk into the mind. He never wearied the reader, but he always exhausted the subject. An opinion of his was an unbroken chain of logic from beginning to end. His argumentation was always characterized by great power, and sometimes it rose into irresistible energy, dashing opposition to pieces with force like that of a battering-ram.

“He never missed the point even of a cause which had been badly argued. He separated the chaff from the wheat almost as soon as he got possession of it. The most complicated entanglement of fact and law would be reduced to harmony under his hands. His arrangement was so lucid, that the dullest mind could follow him with the intense pleasure which we all feel in being able to comprehend the workings of an intellect so manifestly superior. Yet he committed errors. It is wonderful in the course of his long service he did not commit more. A few were caused by inattention; a few by want of time; a few by preconceived notions which led him astray. When he did throw himself into the wrong side of a cause, he usually made an argument which it was much easier to overrule than answer. With reference to his erroneous opinions, he might have used the words of Virgil, which he quoted so happily in Eakin v. Raub (12 Ser. and R.) for another purpose:

‘*Si Pergama dextra
Defendi possent, etiam hæc defensa fuissent.*’

“But he was of all men the most devoted and earnest lover of truth for its own sake. When subsequent reflection convinced him that he had been wrong, he took the first opportunity to acknowledge it. He was often the earliest to discover his own mistakes, as well as the foremost to correct them.

“He was inflexibly honest. The judicial ermine was as unspotted when he laid it aside for the habiliments of the grave, as it was when he first assumed it. I do not mean to award him merely that commonplace integrity which it is no honor to have, but simply a disgrace to want. He was not only incorruptible, but scrupulously, delicately, conscientiously free from all willful wrong, either in thought, word or deed.

“Next, after his wonderful intellectual endowments, the benevolence of his heart was the most marked feature of his character. His was a most genial spirit; affectionate and kind to his friends, and magnanimous to his enemies. Benefits received by him were engraved on his memory as on a tablet of brass; injuries were written in sand. He never let the sun go down on his wrath. A little dash of bitterness in his nature would, perhaps, have given a more consistent tone to his character, and greater activity to his mind. He lacked the quality which Dr. Johnson admired. He was not a good hater.

“His accomplishments were very extraordinary. He was born a musician, and the natural talent was highly cultivated. He was a connoisseur in painting and sculpture. The whole round of English literature was familiar to him. He was at home among the ancient classics. He had a perfectly clear conception of all the great truths of natural science. He had studied medicine carefully in his youth and understood it well. His mind absorbed all kinds of knowledge with scarcely an effort.

“ Judge Gibson was well appreciated by his fellow-citizens ; not so highly as he deserved, for that was scarcely possible. But admiration of his talents and respect for his honesty were universal sentiments. This was strikingly manifested when he was elected in 1851, notwithstanding his advanced age, without partisan connections, with no emphatic political standing, and without manners, habits or associations calculated to make him popular beyond the circles that knew him intimately. With all these disadvantages, it is said, he narrowly escaped what might have been a dangerous distinction—a nomination on both of the opposing tickets. Abroad he has, for very many years, been thought the great glory of his native State. Doubtless the whole Commonwealth will mourn his death ; we all have good reasons to do so. The profession of the law has lost the ablest of its teachers, this Court the brightest of its ornaments, and the people a steadfast defender of their rights, so far as they were capable of being protected by judicial authority. For myself I know no form of words to express my deep sense of the loss we have suffered. I can most truly say of him what was said long ago concerning one of the few mortals who were yet greater than he: I did love the man, and do honor his memory, on this side idolatry, as much as any.”

As a token of respect for the deceased, Court adjourned its session.

John Banister Gibson's birth-place has been given in another place, and it yet remains for the public to be informed of his death, which occurred at the United States Hotel, at 2 o'clock, May 3, 1853, in the 73d year of his age. He was the son of Col. George Gibson of the Revolutionary war, who fell at St. Clair's defeat in 1791. He graduated at Dickinson College in 1800. He then studied law under Thomas Duncan, Esq. He was twice sent to the Legislature—in 1810 and 1811—giving his support to Gov. Snyder and President Madison. In 1818 he was elected to the Supreme bench.

Judge Gibson's remains were taken to Carlisle for interment, on the 4th of May, 1853.

Oil portraits of Judge Gibson and Col. George Gibson are still retained in the old "Gibson house" in Spring township, Perry county, Pennsylvania.

Juniata, spelled C and Ch—oniata and Juneauta, is an Iroquois word, the meaning of which is unknown. The Indians esteemed this river their best hunting ground for deer, elk and beaver.

Liverpool Mercury and People's Advertiser, the title of a weekly newspaper owned and edited at Liverpool, Perry county, by John Huggins. The Mercury was a five-column, 12x16, four-paged paper, devoted to politics, literature, local news and advertising. It was started July 1, 1831, and finally became merged into the Perry County Democrat in June, 1826. The subscription price was $2.00 per annum.

Landisburg Sunday-school, in 1821, collected the following fines for absences: From the superintendent, 6 cents; from directors, 6 cents each, and from each teacher 3 cents.

Linn, Rev. John, D. D., for more than forty years pastor of Center meeting-house, died August 29, 1830, aged 70 years.

Lewis, David, a bold robber who frequented the mountains and mountain gaps of Perry county, died from wounds which he received in the successful attempt to capture him, in Bellefonte jail, 1820. He made no confession.

Mitchell, George, Esq., for many years a justice of the peace for Liverpool, died in that place, in his 39th year, on the 23d of April, 1833. A lengthy obituary recited his many virtues. We find the following lines in the middle of four other stanzas printed in the Liverpool Mercury of September 13, 1833:

With boundless thought thy manly spirit knew
To cool the fires that seared another's breast;
The balm that soothed from reason's fountain drew
To ease the anguish of the mind distressed.

Miller township was formed out of parts of Oliver and Center townships by act of Legislature in 1852.

Mills.—There were thirteen flour mills in Perry county in 1792.

Miller, Hon. Stephen, an ex-Governor of Minnesota, was born and raised to manhood in Carroll township.

Mt. Vernon Forge, noticed in chapter I of the introduction as Lewis' Forge, was erected by Gen. James Lewis in 1807 or 1808. It was operated in connection with Hope Furnace, west of Lewistown, Mifflin county, of which Lewis was one of the proprietors.

Mr. James Blain, marrying one of Lewis' daughters, continued the forge after Lewis quit.

He sold out to a Mr. M'Gara, who failed, and the property came into the possession of Purcell & Woods, of whom, in 1815, William P. Elliott (my informant) and William Power bought the forge and property pertaining. At this time the forge was nearly in ruins, having been so long idle. Messrs. Elliott and Power spent a large sum of money in repairing it. They operated it from the time it was got in order until 1817, when they failed, and the property reverting to its former owners, Purcell & Woods, the fires went out never to be rekindled.

This forge had two fires and two large hammers which were supplied with charcoal from the Forge Hill, and with pig metal from Hope furnace, in Mifflin county, and from Juniata furnace, in Center township, Perry county.

The Forge Hill tract of land contained several hundred acres west of the Juniata river, in Tuscarora township.

Millerstown Gazette, a five-column, 12x18, four-paged weekly, was started at Millerstown by Levi Klauser, Jan. 1, 1857, and continued until April 22, 1858, when the press was removed to Newport, and the paper took the name of Newport Gazette. At the latter place it was continued by Klauser & Bowman, from April 29, 1858, until September 20, 1859. Subscription price was $1.50 per annum.

Mitchell, Robert, Esq., is still living on the farm where he was raised from a child of three years old. He was one of the first board of county commissioners. He is now in his 90th year, and is able to walk about. He related, when visited in July, 1872, the driving of 37 deer into the Juniata, below the Rope Ferry, in one season, from September to January.

M'Clure, Hon. A. K., was born and raised to manhood near Center, in Madison township.

Newport School Board passed a resolution to pay their teachers regular wages while attending the Teachers' Institute, held at that place in December, 1855.

Newport Standard was started at Newport, September 1, 1841, by Samuel Schrack. It was a five-column, 12x18, weekly. The press was removed to Bloomfield, and continued from August 22, 1844, as Perry County Standard, by J. D. Crilly.

Newport News, a weekly newspaper, started by Hervey Smith and E. T. Williams, January 1, 1869. It is independent in politics and specially devoted to general literature, local news, agriculture and advertising. It has been greatly improved by its present editor and proprietor, George Shrom, and is a seven-column, 15x21, single sheet, mailed to subscribers at $1.50 per annum in advance.

Nails.—In 1821 a pound of nails was sold at 10 cents cash, or 11 cents for produce.

Oak Grove Furnace, now in ruins, in Spring township, was erected by Dr. William Hayes & Brother.

Perry Forester, the title of the oldest newspaper published in the county.

It was started in Landisburg, July 12, 1820, by H. W. Peterson and Alexander Magee. It was a five-column, 12x17, single sheet weekly, devoted to politics, foreign and home news, literature and advertising.

H. W. Peterson was an associate editor of the Forester from July 12, 1820, until January 13, 1821. He wielded a ready pen and for erudition stood A No. 1 in his profession. After he left Perry, Peterson edited a paper in Lebanon county, which he quitted to remove to Gault, Upper Canada, where he became probate judge under His Majesty George IV. He died at the latter place.

In the first issue of the Forester we are informed that but one mail reached Landisburg weekly. The Perry Forester was continued by Alexander Magee at Landisburg until April 9, 1829, when the first issue was sent from the office on Main street, Bloomfield. The subscription price of the Forester was $1.75 a year in advance.

Perry County Democrat is the title of the Democratic paper continued in the office of the Perry Forester at Bloomfield by Major John A. Magee. It is devoted to literature, politics, general and local news, and agriculture. It is the oldest of the weekly papers now published, dating its Vol. No. 1 June, 1826. June 20, 1839. Subscription price, $1.50 per annum in advance.

From No. VII. of the same series of articles we learn that $24,000 were subscribed in two days at Bloomfield and Duncannon, and $2,000 at Loysville and Blain toward the Bloomfield route, in 1866.

Patent Medicine.—D. W. Judkin's Patent Specific Ointment for the various diseases was the first advertisement of the kind that appeared in a Perry county paper—January 15, 1829.

Poor-house.—Perry County Poor-house is situated a half-mile south-east of Loysville, on a farm owned by the county. The original buildings were of brick, two stories and a half high, and on account of the arrangement of the rooms not well adapted for the purpose. The new buildings, just about completed, are the best and most expensive public buildings in the county, costing upward of $30,000.

Porter, John B., Esq., spent several years of his life at Liverpool in the capacity of a scrivener; he afterward taught school for a number of terms at Millerstown, and finally removed to Juniata county, where he was elected county superintendent of schools in 1860. Mr. Porter served in this capacity until 1863, when, soon after his term of office expired, he removed with his family to Louise county, Iowa, where he had been but a short time until he was again placed in the educational lead as county superintendent.

Robert Clark & Co.'s Mail Stage between Harrisburg and Bellefonte will leave Buffington's Inn every Friday at noon, and arrive at Bellefonte every Sunday afternoon; returning, leave Bellefonte every Wednesday morning and arrive at Harrisburg every Friday morning.

Fare from Harrisburg to Clark's Ferry, $1.00; Clark's Ferry to Millerstown, $1.00; Millerstown to Lewistown, $2.00; Lewistown to Bellefonte, $2.00, or from Harrisburg to Bellefonte, $6.00.—Advertisement, August, 1820.

Religious.—The following are the religious societies and congregations of Perry county: Presbyterian—Old and New School united—and the Seceder, Lutheran, Reformed Church, Methodist, Evangelical Association, Winebrenner Church, established by Rev. John Winebrenner, of Harrisburg, now called the Church of God, Dunker Society, United Brethren, and a few followers of Andrew J. Smolnicker, who established "Peace Union" on Tuscarora Mountain; also a few Free Lovers.

Sherman's Valley, at an early day, included all of Perry county except Pfoutz's Valley. It received its name from the creek, which was called Sherman's after an Indian trader who was drowned at Gibson's while attempting to cross it with his horse and furs. In this valley, says the author of Watson's Annals, I saw a real "leather stocking" in the person of a Mr. Stewart; twenty-five years ago he had killed as many as sixty deer in one season; he goes out in snow-time in preference, and lays out all night. It was in this valley that I heard of William Penn's iron spur, left on his visit to the Susquehanna, near Columbia, and now in possession of Lewis Pennock, in London Grove, Chester county. Many aged persons, still alive in Carlisle, remember very well when all the carriage of goods and stores westward from Carlisle was done wholly on pack-horses, coming and going in whole companies; only as late as twelve years ago there were not more than three wagons in all Sherman's Valley—all the hauling was done on sleds, in summer as well as winter. A Mrs. Murphy, who died in that valley in 1830, aged nearly one hundred years—having lived a long life there among the Indians—remembered seeing the first wagon arrive at Carlisle, and the indignation it excited among the packers, as likely to ruin their trade! Even the widening of the roads, when first ordered, offended them! The pack-horses used to carry bars of iron on their back, crooked over and around their bodies; barrels were hung on them, one on each side. She remembered that the first Indian track (or path) to go westward, was to cross at Simpson's, four miles below John Harris'; then across Conodoguinet, at Middlesex; thence up the mountain across Crogan's Gap (now Sterret's); thence down the mountain and across Sherman's creek at Gibson's; then by Dick's Gap (the gap between Dick's and Quaker hills, through which the Landisburg road passes); then through Sherman's Valley by Concord to the Burnt Cabins; then to the waters of the Alleghany and down the river.

Shumaker, J. H., Ph. D., was born near Sandy Hill, Madison township. He received his preparatory education at Academia Academy, Juniata Co., Pa., of which he was the efficient principal after he graduated at Princeton College, until 1868, when he assumed charge of Chambersburg Academy, his present position.

Smiley, Rev. Geo. W., D. D., a son of Mrs. Huling's by her marriage to Mr. Smiley, was born in Carroll township. He was a clerk in Hoffenstein's store, Carlisle, when but a boy; from this he went to Indiana, where he became clerk and book-keeper in a store, and from the latter place he went to Kentucky, where he was converted to religion in Rev. Dr. Bascom's church, under whose tutorship he studied theology. He is widely known as an effective public speaker, and is now engaged by the First Presbyterian Church of Pottsville, Pa.

Store Advertisement, July 19, 1820.—"Dry Goods, including Straw Bonnets, Hardware, Glass and Queensware, Brandy, Spirits and Wine."

Sypher.—The family of whom J. R. Sypher, author of histories of Pennsylvania Reserves, and of the States of Pennsylvania and New Jersey, "American Popular Speakers" and "Art of Teaching," and Hon. J. H. Sypher, M. C. from Louisiana, lived in Pfoutz's Valley, Greenwood township, where they were born.

Hon. Jay Hale Sypher was born July 22, 1837. He received a collegiate education, studied law and was admitted to the bar; he entered the Union army as a private and rose through all the grades to that of brigadier-general, which he held when mustered out of service at the close of the war, Nov. 25, 1865. Having located in Louisiana in January, 1866, he was a delegate to the National Republican Convention in Chicago which nominated Grant and Colfax. He was elected to the Fortieth and Forty-first Congresses, and was re-elected to the Forty-second Congress as a Republican by a majority of 5,500 over Walker, Democrat.

Superstitions.—Among the methods of relieving the ills to which suffering humanity is heir, none is more universally practiced or more firmly believed than the πορυ-ρωσι. It cures the various forms of erysipelas, the bite of a snake, burns, rheumatism, chills and fevers, and stops the flow of blood by the power of words and the scarlet silk thread or a panful of coals of fire, applied three times, provided the patient is possessed of the scriptural full measure of faith in these means.

A few persons will not plant seeds when the moon "points up," believing if they do so the plants will grow to tops or go to seed. Shingles must not be driven on a roof at this time or their edges will turn upward. These persons believe Friday to be an "unlucky day," and that the howling of a dog or the crowing of a hen portends evil, a death, or a reverse of fortune.

The belief in such notions, strengthened by the early training of parents who were believers, is so tenacious that nothing but a more liberal education can ever change it.

Teachers' Gun.—HARRISBURG, March 20, 1862.—Received from Lewis B. Kerr, County Superintendent of Perry county, $26, contributed by teachers of Perry county toward the purchase of the "Teachers' Gun."

THOMAS H. BURROWES.

Some months previous to this a movement was started in the State, by the teachers, to procure a gun by contribution, to be presented to the government. This gun was to be christened the "Teachers' Gun."

Tailoring in 1825.—Making fashionable coat, $3.50; next quality, $3.00; home-made cloth, $1.50; fashionable pants, $1.00

Traveling Show.—The first traveling show that ever visited Perry county, exhibited in Landisburg, September 7th, 1826.

Turkeys.—David Snyder, an early resident of Jackson township, related that, when a boy, while a blacksmith was doing some work for him, he went to the fence of a neighboring field with a shot gun, when he made a noise which caused the wild turkeys feeding in it to raise their heads and run together, when he fired and killed five at one shot. He is said to have frequently killed two at one shot with a rifle.

The Farmers' Bank of Millerstown was organized December 21st, 1872, by electing Perry Kreamer President, William Rickabaugh, Cashier, Jacob Yohn, Jonathan Weiser, Lewis Gilflen, Philip Kepner, James Patterson and J. E. Singer, Directors. The capital stock was fixed at $50,000.

White, Thomas J., was born in Perry county, Pennsylvania, May 17, 1827. At the age of five years he removed with his parents to Ohio, settling in Crawford county, where he has resided since 1832.

On December 1, 1869, he was elected superintendent of the Crawford County Infirmary, which position he held up to the time of his election to a seat in the House of Representatives of the Sixteenth General Assembly of Ohio.

He is an earnest worker and careful representative of his county, well deserving the place he holds.

Warm Springs.—The tract of land which contains the celebrated Perry County Warm Springs was patented by one Dently, who was its original owner.

It came into possession of James and John Kennedy next after Dently. They lived in a stone house about forty rods west of the springs, on the road leading to Landisburg.

John Hipple, Esq., leased the property of the Kennedys for a term of years and erected the first building, which was 40x45 feet, with kitchen attached, opened for the entertainment of the public. Previous to this the farm-houses for miles around were crowded with persons who came from a distance to drink of and bathe in the waters of the springs. After the expiration of Mr. Hipple's lease, William Updegraffe, who had come by marriage to be one of the heirs to the property, kept open the buildings during the summer for the entertainment of strangers, and employed his leisure time in farming and working in the pottery which he had erected.

After Updegraffe, the property was sold to Mr. H. H. Etter, who erected the houses over the springs, remodeled the bath-house built by Mr. Hipple, so that all the tubs could be supplied with water at the same time, and built a new bath-house. He improved the grounds, erected the summer-house on the island of about one acre in Sherman's creek. He made gravel and tan walks about the premises, and built to the main building an east wing seventy-five feet long, in which he had a ball-room in the basement. He built the house on the hill with a bowling-alley and the billiard-rooms in it. Mr. Etter is said to have had two hundred boarders at the springs at one time, beside transient visitors, of whom there were not a few.

With an eye single to the ornamental, no doubt, Mr. Etter had a hydraulic ram placed below the first spring, which forced the water to a reservoir above the road, whence it was conveyed to the park below the road in pipes, and jetted upward from the center of a large basin. No other use was made of the water of the reservoir, although its position and capacity might have been made to supply the buildings with water with a small, if any, additional expenditure.

After Etter, the property passed into the hands of R. M. Henderson and John Hays, Esqrs., who leased it to John Early, who kept it but a single season. Mr. Wm. T. Dewalt next leased and kept open the buildings for two years. He was succeeded by William Vansdalen, who continued two years.

He removed in the forenoon of April 4th, 1865, and in the evening about 11 o'clock the buildings were discovered to be on fire. Mr. John Louch was to occupy the property in a few days after Vansdalen left it, but did not come on account of the buildings being destroyed. After the fire the springs ceased to be a resort, and the property was allowed to become impaired by neglect. In 1867, Mr. Christian Thudium bought the property, and soon afterward sold it to Mr. Abraham Bower, its present proprietor. Mr. Bower has begun in earnest to repair, build and fit the property for what it seems so well, naturally, designed—a resort for the invalid or pleasure-seeker, during the hot weather of summer. Indeed we doubt whether a better place could be found for those who are in feeble health at any season of the year.

Mr. Bower has erected, under roof and partly finished (1872), a main building, 60x30, with large kitchen attached, three stories high, which he designs opening for the accommodation of visitors next summer. His building will have more spacious and in every way pleasanter appointments than the old one, and we are assured other things will be in keeping. We like the plan of having small cottages for private families, as is contemplated here.

The Springs.—The water of these springs contains “carbonate of iron held in suspension by an excess of carbonic acid gas; it is strongly impregnated, and a highly salubrious chalybeate water.” The water of these springs have a wide celebrity among those who know them for their medicinal properties and healing virtues. The temperature, as their name indicates, is warm, but not so much so as to produce nausea; on the contrary, invigoration and health.

No. 1, the warmest and largest spring, discharges ninety-three gallons per minute. The water rises from a sandstone rocky bottom of thirty-six square feet, and is confined within these limits by a stone wall. The appearance of the water is clear, with an occasional bubble, or if disturbed, bubbles, rising to the surface.

No. 2 probably discharges thirty-six gallons per minute, and is situated two hundred feet from No. 1, at the root of a large poplar tree.

No. 3 discharges about forty-five gallons of water per minute, and has a surface of seventy-two square feet. The water of this spring bubbles from the bottom as in No. 1, and has the appearance of being more highly impregnated with iron.

No. 4 is an uncovered spring which rises at the root of an ash, and has a capacity of fifty gallons per minute. There are two other springs, of an average capacity of fifty gallons per minute. These springs all issue from the earth in a due south-west and north-east line, along the foot of Quaker Hill, which here runs parallel with Sherman's creek, into which their waters are discharged.

The location of the springs could not be more propitious for rest and recuperation from the cares of business. With Mount Pisgah in front, Quaker Hill, from which they issue, in the rear, and Sherman's creek rolling between, which a mile and a half below breaks over the rocks into gentle rapids, and the near proximity of the celebrated Falling (or Dropping) Springs, what more romantic spot could be chosen?

Vancamp.—The Vancamps came originally from Holland, from whence they immigrated to Esopus, (now Kingston), New York, which they left hastily in terror of an Indian massacre, bringing away all their household effects on the backs of two horses.

They journeyed, driving before them their cows and hogs, until they came to Bald Eagle Valley, Clinton county, Pennsylvania, where they sojourned, probably with or near their friends or country folks, until after the French and Indian war, when they left the Bald Eagle and came to Perry county and settled on and above the site of the present railroad station, at Bailey's, in 1763, where their descendants of the third and fourth generation still reside.

Water.—There is not a farm of 100 acres in Perry county but has a stream of running water on it. The streams are Sherman's creek, which rises in Round Top Mountain, in Franklin county, and empties into the Susquehanna below Duncannon; Little Juniata creek, which rises between Mahonoy and Dick's hills, in Carroll township, and empties into the Susquehanna at Duncannon; Little Buffalo creek, which rises in Saville township, and empties into the Juniata at Newport; Big Buffalo creek, which rises in Liberty Valley, Madison township, and discharges its waters into the Juniata above Newport, in Oliver township; and Raccoon creek, which rises in Tuscarora township and empties into the Juniata on the opposite side of the river below Millerstown. All these streams have an eastward course. Of the streams that flow westward, Cocalamus creek rises in the Shade Mountains, Juniata county, and discharges its waters into the Juniata one mile below Millerstown, and Wildcat creek rises in Forge Hills and Buffalo Mountains, in Greenwood township, and empties into the Juniata about two miles from the mouth of the Cocalamus.
